The cover we have chosen for this essay tells a lot in itself. The Beast, Satan, the Adversary. It's not at all uncommon to encounter individuals who will freely acknowledge the seriousness of the concept and who will use the term "Beast System" openly. But if they are awaiting a horned Devil to appear and to announce himself, it's never going to happen. There are, after all, no such things as "demons".

Why is it with people that they demand the super-dramatic, the two-by-four to the forehead, the banners and brass band? They are the perfect pawns for imagery - regardless whose hands the image-making power may be in - and they completely reject or overlook the commonplace, the everyday, the ordinary. They must have a "sign" even when there are "signs" aplenty.

Of course, the talk of the Beast comes from out of the Bible, let us make clear here at the start. And a major clue is provided when it states that they will be found "worshipping the Beast" at the End Times. No one but a kook or a crank would knowingly do this and for that reason we must keep to the commonplace or the great masses of people who constitute the norm.

To worship the image of a demon, you've got to be crazy and, in any event, you're not going to affect much by it other than to consign yourself into the margins and into irrelevancy. You may even get yourself into trouble with the law. I maintain here at the outset that the concept of the Beast is very real but that it is little understood by these same great masses of people, those who really matter, those who are its target.

That famous line from out of Revelation - as to worshipping the Beast - tells any intelligent person that the masses of people will be doing this unknowingly. They will be doing it as a matter of course, as a matter of what most will perceive as "right", or expedient, or profitable, or safe, or handy. Or they will be doing it because it is the only thing to do as a part of the mass because no one in their right mind wants to be found anywhere within the margins of society.

Commonly today and for a long time past they babble on about the "Mark of the Beast", that is, the "666" mentioned in Revelation. To most, this means CONTROL. And control, by itself, is not a bad thing. It more has to do with who is doing the controlling and for what purpose. However, it is interesting to note that the technological means for that kind of "demoniacal" control has now caught up with a text two thousand years old. And again, technology is not a bad thing either but rather in whose hands this powerful tool does rest.

I personally have familiarized myself with some of the major religious sects in the United States and with their own "take" on the Beast System. They condemn the very hell out of it - if you'll pardon the expression - and state quite frankly that we are living right in the very midst of it now (and for a long time past.) They don't elaborate too much on details, however, except to stress that you should join their sect. And when the services are over, they each drive home in their Cadillac, Mercedes or BMW. Anyone ought to know that it is wrong to bite the hand that feeds you. Me, I had to walk or take the bus.

For a time I even worked in a Presbyterian Church and grew familiar with its young pastor. One question that had bothered me all my life was: Why all these different, supposedly "Christian" denominations? And, to be sure, these same Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, Baptists, etc., do not represent the kind of "weirdies" I mentioned in the above paragraph. No. They do absolutely represent the great masses which I am stressing the importance of.

So I asked this young and most sincere minister what the actual difference was between, say, his church and the Methodists down the street (whose own minister and wife were frequent dinner guests of mine at home.) His answer was that it was all in the way they handled their internal business affairs. Some from the top, down. Some from the bottom, up. This was a great clarification as never at any time could I discern any difference in their lines philosophically. But a hell of a thing to divide yourselves up on, I thought.

You may begin to get the idea that I'm not religious. I am not and never have been. But I pride myself on having validated the Bible. Lines like, "Attend the church of your choice.", have always sickened me. And here we arrive at the crux of this book: Personal choice. Somewhere deep in my most primary instinct has been the sense that where there's "choice", there's meaninglessness and confusion. Is there no real TRUTH? And, if so, how could there ever be any variance off of that?

They are saying, in effect, to suit yourself. "Do what thou wilt." That was the by-line of the famous Satanist of the early Twentieth Century, Alistair Crowley. And to modernize the language a bit, it was also the slogan of the degenerate and woe-begone "hippies" of the 1960s: "Do your own thing." Formlessness, a giving up. The one, major spur in my life was the rebellion against this idea. I demand clarity and genuine purpose.

I realize that I'm invoking the name of hell a lot in this introduction but... Play hell in finding real clarity and purpose in this day and age.

Another question I asked that same, young minister was this: If it is the Beast System and if Satan truly rules the world at present, then why is it he permits such comfortable and wealthy churches as the Presbyterians and the Methodists to operate unmolested? His answer was most revealing. It had to do with his having troubled over that very issue and having come to the conclusion that he must further liberalize and democratize the line and the stance of his church. I was satisfied. The man - and all the millions like him - was blind, deluded, lost. Their answer is to throw more gasoline on the fire.

I neglected, purposefully, to include the second half of my original question. Why would the Satanic System leave the Church alone...

unless it either posed no threat to it... OR unless it was actually AIDING in the Satanic cause? No point, I figured, in deliberately antagonizing this sincere young man.

When, during the 1990s, I did succeed - at least to my own satisfaction - in validating, unravelling and demystifying the Bible, one of the several basic conclusions I made was the reality behind the mythic, allegorical terms, "Good" and "Evil". These are loosely tossed around nowadays in a completely subjective, emotional and meaningless way. As even Anton LaVey, of the modern-day Church of Satan, rightly pointed out, by this, one is always "good" one's self while the other guy is "evil". No. It is rather like this: "Good" means clarity while "Evil" means confusion.

A person could consult a dictionary of synonymous terms for all the many applicable spin-offs from the above. One of the many could be, "On track" versus "Off track". Then, of course, any reasonable person would chime in: "According to what?" To be very sure, not according to one's own likings for there we have the beginnings of confusion itself. No. There is one reality, it is quite knowable and it is that and that alone which must dictate all.

In a number of previous essays I've written about Reality versus Belief. Reality is unchanging - exactly as God said about himself - while a person, if they should choose to, can "believe" they are a pair of needle-nose pliers. And so what could be more REAL or fundamental than RACE? Man didn't create it. He can only foul it up through misguided "belief". History itself is no more, no less than the recorded development of the White Race, like it or not. (And, assuredly, these colored types don't like it.)

Where coloreds are concerned, their own development coincides directly with contact with Whites. Conversely, this same contact invariably leads to the downturn of White affairs and fortunes. What, after all, constitutes the so-called "Third World" other than the colored billions? Politely called by the Liberal establishment the "developing nations", some are among the earth's oldest countries. So let's see a little "development!", come on!

The fact - the reality - is that places like Egypt clear across to India, with regard to their having been the most brilliant civilizations of their time, were established as White. The hard, historic record shows this without any question. Then they went colored and that was that. Yes, certain Egyptian priests and Indian Brahmas held out within a "caste" system until late but, as stressed earlier, we are talking about the broadest possible masses of people for it is they which define what a nation actually is.

So we arrive at the nation, the community. We arrive at the here and the now. We start where we are and we look backward and forward. To wonder presupposes much. Those today found worshipping the Beast still reveal the tale by their very coming apart at the seams. The thrust of this essay has to do with what's been lost, what has come to replace it and the way this has come about.

Finally, if we are to intelligently discuss any such mythical term as "The Beast", it is first necessary to clearly define what makes it The Beast in the first place.

Not control, as we have already stated, but rather purpose and agenda. More to the point, the loss of purpose on the part of the White masses and the hidden agenda of those wielding all this sinister and high-tech control.

The Bible, the source from which we get this talk of The Beast, has three of them, in fact, all matters of historical record. First, ancient Babylon. Second, ancient Rome. Third, whatever would be found standing in world dominance at the End of Time. That, in essence, would be the United States and, indeed, all of Western Civilization. Why the end of time? Simply because it is now - at least for the first time since Noah - global. But mainly because it directly affects the welfare of the White Race... nobody else matters.

So we have military and economic dominance which is irresistible in the world. The old, familiar line also from Revelation, "He who lives by the sword shall die by the sword.", is followed immediately - though few know of it - by this: "Who can war against the Beast?" And what, I would ask, seems to be the chief export of this Beast? Why, so-called "democracy", of course.

But what else did each of the three Beasts share in common that really tells the tale? Multi-racialism and multi-culturalism, with everything for money, power and pleasure. And all of this on the backs of and at the expense of the White masses who, at the time, were found shouldering the whole mess. The outcomes in each case? Degeneration and an extension of the Third World. To make it worse, any outlying enclave which might otherwise choose to remain White and untainted is FORCED, COERCED by this military-economic-propaganda combine to kow-tow. No escape. The Beast.

I undertake this essay in order to outline precisely the way that this has come about in this, the "most enlightened" of times.

II

When speaking about the Beast there is a seeming contradiction to take up. The society appears to have fallen apart and yet there is ever more centralized control, more and more of a police state in order to assure "your freedom".

It is a dictatorship and has been one for a long time. People can't see it because it has no face. It's a philosophical dictatorship. They can't see that either because these sham "elections" are permitted - even encouraged - to go on.

It's all "America" and the "Americans" nowadays. But if you can recall the time of Vietnam maybe you'll also remember how Americanism was practically a dirty word. The filthy "hippies" in the streets, the dirty crud on campuses and the outright traitors in Congress and the Senate not to mention the alien media. The flag burnings and desecrations, etc. All of that gone. Did things clean up?

No. Not in the slightest. That war against Communism was effectively torpedoed by all of the elements named above. And Communism, don't forget, is the hard-core, solidified, militant religion of man-made belief as opposed to reality. They even "got" the U.S. President involved at that time, Nixon. One more seeming contradiction is that after all that their darling creation, the Soviet Union, went down the drain. The world now free of, safe from Communism? Not if you know what it really is.

In nature, in reality, there is no such thing as "equality". That is an insane notion hatched among a few fevered brains from around the time of the French Revolution. These were what might be called "proto-Communists". A trick to get the masses stirred up against their own natural leaders and their own natural order. To be then replaced by what? The lie that things can be made any way these same lunatics want to dream them up.

More apparent contradiction: The drafters and signers of the U.S. Constitution. Didn't they declare all men to be created equal? By far the majority of them being slave-holders, I think we can know what they meant by that. Further down in that same document it states that, when it came to taking the census, Negro slaves were to be counted as three-fifths of a human being. Only White, land-owning males could vote. There was nothing remotely resembling so-called "democracy" in the United States until well into the Twentieth Century.

The country, obviously, has been changed from what it was founded as. While sufficient of the old values still stood, those same subversives - Communists and crypto-Communists - hated everything this place represented. Now that it more resembles Stalinist Russia, they're taking things more to heart.

Why, even the present wars have the solid backing from many of the very ones who were busy in their college days undermining the War in Vietnam. The "enemy" now, however, is religion. Very ancient and what has held those respective societies together for centuries. But somewhere it has been decided that they must receive the blessings of "democracy", no matter how much destabilization, destruction and bloodshed might result. That's criminal, that's insane, that's Communism.

Remember what was said about "Good" and "Evil" previously. Whether in the United States or in the Middle East, to take a society that has been working just fine for generations and, in the case of this country, subvert it over a period of generations, or, in the case of the Middle East, to use this country as a military "Golem" to go and destroy it, is sheer criminal madness. It doesn't work. It may be ram-rodged through and propped up by military occupation, terror and whatever else but it doesn't work. This is evil.

Could there be a better example of a dictatorship than this? The real conspirators will always point to so-called "dictators" from the past, Hitler being the prime example. But the problem with these examples is two-fold: One, they were hailed and loved by their people; Two, their policies worked. More even than that was that their programs and agendas were not secret. They swept to power on their programs. These conspirators today have had to rely upon lies and deceptions - all masked by sweet talk of "freedom" and "democracy" - in order to slip on the very real shackles.

Anyway, according to Revelation, it is the Beast that will be in power when God returns to clean things up once and for all. The Beast, embodying all that is evil. Hitler and his policies haven't been around for a long time and, indeed, it is he who is and always shall be held up by the Beast System as the epitome of "evil". For someone like myself, thinking in straight lines at all times, that says it all.

How then can it be a dictatorship with all this heavy emphasis upon "freedom", "personal choice", etc.? Throughout the Bible there is mention again and again of "the stone that the builders set at naught". One stone out of perhaps thousands which go into a structure. The very corner stone. The absolute foundation of everything: Race. Take away this foundation and the rest is rendered instantly meaningless, destined to crumble. For what does the rest of it then serve?

You may then procede to indulge in any and all manner of gibberish, any kind of chase-your-tail activity, and you will receive System blessings and even protection. But bring up race and you will feel the weight of the dictatorship not to mention the bloodthirstiness of the otherwise "liberal" and "tolerant" mob, a la the French Revolution.

So there we have the situation. A society pulling apart, going crazy, and an iron fist in charge, holding it together through a police state. Madness, futility. And we also know the missing ingredient that once had made it right, proper, natural and workable: Race.

But, you may say, this place is as of the present writing, still half

White. Doesn't that count for something? You bet it does. That is the only thing keeping it going as the Number One military and economic power in the world. But the fact that its motives and its spirit are not White is what makes all of the rest into the Beast. Exactly as in Egypt at the time of the Exodus, the Whites are now a trapped remnant within the confines of an alien structure. (And we already know what has happened to those Whites who have tried to leave this mess, even for the wilderness: The Beast System forces hunt them down and murders them.)

In your mind by now the nature of the Beast ought to be taking shape.

Still, the question remains: How could this have happened?

III

If then, as stated last chapter, the United States remains yet nominally fifty percent White, consider this: Fifty years ago it stood at ninety percent White. Here we go again... What the hell goes on here?

China, I'm sure, still remains one hundred percent Chinese exactly as it has been from before recorded time.

This is moving fast, whatever it is, by any standards at all.

For something like this to take place to a White nation something had to have gone wrong. Something must be missing. This essay is dedicated to that missing factor as well as to the reason for it.

We've started with discussion of the Beast System. With or without that, the question is one of: Why do societies fall apart? (Because a healthy society can never fall victim to being scooped up by the Beast.) The answer - not meaning to be flippant at all - is that because THEY CAN.

It's obviously within human nature for this to occur. In past essays

I've discussed the flawed "domestication" of the human type. Domesticated wolves - or dogs - for example, are a mess unless strictly governed by a higher awareness: Humans. They'll quickly devolve down to mere "mutts" in very short order unless consciously and even forcibly kept from it. And, as I said then, to these dogs, it is WE who are "God".

To ourselves - domesticated apes - there is also a God and that, as I have stated before, is those who came here from somewhere off earth and MUTATED, or up-bred us from various species of great apes using their own DNA. My "Eight Words", of which I am very proud, go like this: "This is a DNA colonization from deep space."

We see how shakey this process of domestication is among other animals, dogs being perhaps the best and easiest example. It's worst of all within human beings. People are crazy. That constant fight between the animal brain and the God-like brain. That's what religion has been about. "Don't be carnal, be spiritual.", as Saint Paul admonished. We are animals and we must survive within this atmosphere just like any other animal.

But we have that shot of extraterrestrial DNA within us. What is the actual difference, then, between us and any other specie? We - Whites - have UNLIMITED POTENTIAL for development to reach back to the stars and rejoin our Father in Heaven... or in Space, whichever you may want to call it. That is the ONLY difference. To otherwise compete for existence upon this planet against any other specie, we come in piss poor.

If that could be kept in the front of the minds of all Whites, everywhere, there'd hardly be any problem. Today, even with space exploration still at the crawling stage, people do not realize this. What about a hundred years ago? Or a thousand? Most of the time it had to rely upon pure religion, pure faith rather than hard realization of facts such as I've discussed.

However, as is pointed out by experts in the field, the further back in time you go, the bigger the building blocks become. All this sort of thing was better understood in distant antiquity than it is today. Christ himself being the prime example. Now we've moved back into the Bible where the concept of the Beast originated.

In past essays I've said that there has never been any such thing as a "man who changed history." There have been, however, men who have kept history on course. Christ was one these. Adolf Hitler was another. Hitler is the most vilified man of this age. Christ was the most vilified man of his time. Human nature. One has got to remain objective and in order to do that one has got to engage the God-like brain over the animal brain.

Just as we have delved like children into space, we have also delved ever so slightly into quantum physics. Time and existence seem to be like pages of a book, turning and overlapping. All the talk of after-life, of precognition, of deja vu, of reincarnation, even of "ghosts", etc., is rooted in this scientific theory which we are only now coming to understand.

For these purposes, it means that past, present and future are all on-going, simultaneously in multiple dimensions, parallel universes. It's all happened before. I will say right now that one real "kicker" I've found to this is that, somehow, it remains variable... don't ask me how. If the great prophets, etc., were real - and I know that they are - this is the only explanation. They were literally SHOWN the future by these extraterrestrials who could move through time.

Basically, according to the Old Testament, our people were to be punished, chastised for deviating from the Law and losing the Holy Land. For God only chastises those whom he loves, as it goes. They would forget who they even were. They would be "sifted" through the nations, over a thousand years and a thousand miles. Their "filthiness" would be removed from them. And they would be settled in a place from which they'd never have to move again. And they would have a new name, leaving their old name to God's accursed.

That new home was to become Europe, "Land of the Setting Sun", to the west. The former home was ancient Israel. The new name was Christian. The accursed are the Jews. The people we are speaking of are ourselves, the Whites.

There were laws given at the beginning to ensure that this experiment from space would not be lost. Laws beyond the "Ten Commandments" which, exactly as with the U.S. Constitution, were implicitly for Whites alone. "Don't pollute the Holy Seed." And condemnations of "the mingled peoples", etc., abound throughout the Old Testament.

But God also spoke of us as having "hard hearts, brows of solid brass and stiff necks" and that he was going to leave us alone lest we should "piss him off" so badly that he should destroy us at a blow.

That's about all we see today, a world full of people running around with their heads up their asses. How did the Bible put it? "Chasing after the lusts of their own imaginings."

My point? Even at fifty percent of the population, that ought to be plenty enough to be a determining factor. Yet it is not. We carry the load but it is someone else who calls the tune. Why? Because we have once again lost our awareness, lost our cohesion, lost our identity, and, most of all, lost our COMMUNITY.

A mere bunch of "individuals". Shattered, fragmented. Lost. At the mercy of those who have NOT lost this same kind of awareness and unity of purpose.

Well, I can promise you that none of this registered with any of these so-called "educators".

Alienation is the universal condition now and has been for a long time. Indeed for as long as most now living can recall. I've said elsewhere that unless you have a clear and solid recollection of the 1950s and early 1960s at the very least, then you cannot know of a time when things weren't knocked off kilter and basically insane. With regard to the school situation, the mindless bureaucrats will say, "It's our job to see that you attend." The totally alienated youth will respond, "Even if it means your death and mine?"

Utterly brilliant!

What's that other old saying? They've taken the nest and turned it into an ant hill.

But wait a minute. really. Still using the school system as an example, let's at least try to remember what its actual purpose was supposed to be. A foundation added onto by every former generation to be gifted to the present and future generations to continue to build upon. I mean, how crazy for each generation to have to begin all over again at Square One. That would be no development. That would be Third World. And, as such, the institution of education ought properly to be one of the most sacred.

The American educational system was, as of the 1950s, the best in the world. But there were those who didn't like it because Blacks and other minorities weren't being given a fair shake. The Bible admonishes against - and indeed it should appear the worst kind of folly - either to give out to "strangers" our knowledge and technology or to take in from these same "strangers" any of their superstitious, primitive ways. But, after a furious but losing battle, United States schools were integrated.

At around the same time, the "Fascistic" concept of discipline came under attack. And then we were introduced to such new concepts as the "Blackboard Jungle", "juvenile delinquency", etc. Today and for a long time past, students are being graduated as illiterates. The U.S. education system today trails behind several European countries.

Still, they "must attend". Parents are now liable for punishment if their children do not attend. The obvious question ought to be: If they're not receiving proper education by all this, then why the emphasis on attending? In the ant hill society it is far more important to be properly CONDITIONED than to be properly educated. Taken as a tiny child and exposed to multi-racialism and multi-culturalism, to be ruined at the start in other words.

That's pure Marxism, pure insanity, pure criminality and pure evil. And because it has all the force of the State behind it, it does in every aspect represent the Beast.

I did actually start up these lectures to these seminars by pointing out that the various Black, Oriental and Mexican gangs were called just that: Gangs. But that any similar such group of White youths was not called a "gang" but, instead, a "Hate Group". Interesting and revealing at the same time.

These colored gangs, as I told those teachers, were in all actuality groupings of formerly subject peoples who were now reasserting their own, tribal ways amidst a society - an old "Imperialistic" society - they sense has gone rotten, does in no way represent them and hasn't even the viability to display self-respect or to assert self-defence any longer. That's certainly one manifestation of alienation. They are, in fact, attempting to rebuild a rudimentary society to which they may feel that they belong. And I cannot condemn them for this.

Where the Whites are concerned, it's exactly the same. Everything "official" is stamped with multi-culturalism and multi-racialism. It's all for the "buck". It's all, even as the Old Testament says about the dying society there in ancient Israel, a matter of "hypocrisy, iniquity and folly". And even if they are, just as I was, unable to articulate it in this way, they FEEL IT nonetheless. They want something of their own.

But why aren't the colored groups called, "Hate"? What about all this relatively new raft of so-called "Hate Laws"? Ever hear of a colored type being convicted under one of those? No. They are aimed - by the State itself - against Whites and White self-defence. This isn't even-handed. An important point to remember. The playing field isn't level.

I've posed the question before, elsewhere: Would a White society, governed by Whites - "of, by and for", so to speak - do this to itself? And when the horrendous results began coming in, as they have been doing now for half a century, wouldn't a sane and honest society and government take corrective measures to halt and reverse the process? Apparently not. The answer, as with that misguided Presbyterian pastor, is to throw ever more gasoline on the fire. "More democracy."

In this small volume it is my task to take and separate what could be seen as a result of human nature, of the natural progression of the rise and fall of civilizations and the role played by conspiracy and hidden agenda. In this way alone can any of this be made to make sense.

Things are a mess. People themselves are a mess. I, in my lifetime of over half a century, have witnessed it become markedly, alarmingly worse and worse. And they are committed to making it worse still. The colored, alien call is, "Keep your eyes on the prize." I would wonder aloud at the teachers' seminars as to exactly what they meant by that. And I am quite convinced that it means they won't be satisfied until this place looks like Mexico or South America. Some "prize". Yet there is nothing to stand in the way. There are no healthy trends. Basically, there is no hope. No hope, that is, for things within this System, the Beast System.

Students of history, as I am, can look at various times in the past when it was clear that civilization was on the dramatic upswing. Because, as the saying goes, those not busy being born are busy dying. If one has a feel for these things, is able to see and spot these historic trends by instinct, they'll already know that the very last time any genuine vitality was shown by any portion of the White, Western world, it was shown on the part of National Socialist Germany during the 1930s and early 1940s. Since then, only decay.

Very simply put, then, the wrong side won the Second World War.

Our stupid teachers when I was a kid would like to say, when commenting on the Second World War, "We might all be speaking German today." Wow! How awful! Don't the fools know that German was only voted down by one vote at the Continental Congress as being adopted at the beginning as the official language of the United States? And how about the present moment? What of now Spanish as the new language? Or, better yet, "Ebonics"?

There are conquests and then there are conquests. Great Britain was "conquered" again and again until the very final wave came in 1066 with the Norman invasion. Important to note that each one of these invasions was on the part of the very best of blood. That's the only thing to matter. It would have been the same with any German conquest. Nothing really would have been lost apart from a rotten ruling system. Much would have been gained, much would have been saved, much would have been prevented.

This place here today is being conquered, very literally, by wave after wave of what they like to call either "legal" or "illegal immigrants". Without a shot being fired. With all the naked, monstrous power this Beast System has at its command, and still it continues unabated, you've got to believe that it is PLANNED this way. Flood and ruin the nation with an ocean of dirty blood. Masses of dirty blood; The Third World; The same. John alluded directly to this in Revelation when he spoke of "the camp of the Saints" being descended upon by the countless masses of the colored Third World and led by "Gog and Magog". It is this which triggers God's direct intercession.

A thing like this can happen for only one reason: There is an unrecognized power in control here with an unknown agenda at work. All the power and force, every resource of the State is at its command. The great masses of people see only the State, see only the old, outward forms, the old institutions - like the Flag - and just continue working their jobs, paying their taxes, obeying the laws as they are dictated and, perhaps once in awhile, voting in some sham, meaningless "election".

How about THIS on the ballot as a referendum: All coloreds to be deported to continent of origin. Problem being, this place is only half White now and most Whites are so screwed-up in their thinking that they wouldn't respond to this opportunity appropriately. No. You won't get a chance to react. You won't be given a chance to fight. That last chance was the Second World War and the Beast had most of White, Western Civilization duped and lied to into thinking it was fighting to preserve its "way of life", its "freedom", etc. Truthfully, what would most of those old veterans think of this mess now? I know what my own father and many others like him thought of it. They HATED it!

Historically, there is always a turning point. For Western Civilization that turning point came in the first half of the Twentieth Century. We can't look at East and West, North America and Europe. We can only look at White, Western, Christian Civilization. By the dawn of the Twentieth Century, all of these nations were in the same boat. But then they'd always shared the same boat together as brothers: The Brothers of Israel, the Twelve Tribes having moved and expanded into Europe and North America, sharing the same origin, the same blood, the same destiny.

(And when, before, I made reference to the Spanish language and to so-called "Ebonics", what I meant was a CORRUPTION of not only the Spanish language but the English language as well. A true Spaniard is indistinguishable from a true Englishman or a true German, etc. What I was referring to were Spanish-speaking INDIANS and English-speaking NEGROES. One more danger of taking "strangers" within your own culture made manifest. They will eventually come to SUPPLANT you!)

What I've been working up to is that you cannot take a billion years of evolution and change it in a few, short generations. To believe otherwise is to be - once again - Communist. You may certainly take what required generations to build and create and WRECK IT. You may - by removing truth and injecting lies - POLLUTE THE BLOOD of a once good and noble citizenry. All of that has, again, to do with what I started out with: This "human condition". Who hasn't heard about Pavlov and his dogs? Conditioning. Can you suppose humans are immune to these principles? How about the computers? "Garbage in; Garbage out."

Or are you too conceited to think in these terms?

Conceit. That's it. Man having fallen in love with himself. Man who has lost all sight of a Creator. Having lost all sight of a purpose and a destiny. Really, what are these people today living for? To further filthy up the air and the water? To have more "toys" at the end than their fellows? To "score points" in some afterlife? Mainly, however, to indulge in more pleasure and escapism while dragging themselves regularly to meaningless work in order to repeat the daily process.

In fairness, no matter where they may turn, it is all false. Truth itself has been vilified. Race is everything. Race is the nation. Race is what God created. The furtherance of the race is the purpose and the destiny. Minus this and nothing means anything. What I am stressing with this essay is that for a situation like this to have come about requires there having been a LOSS OF COMMUNITY, a White awareness and cohesion. As with my discussion of the educational system earlier, without this racial awareness, the established institutions themselves become all form and no function, travesties, mockeries.

Before entering into the historic pattern of this as well as the role played by incendiaries which help fan the flames of destruction, it is well to go briefly into the foundation of the philosophy which has, for two thousand years, been the basis of Western belief. (And always watch out for that word: "Belief".)

As a young person, I saw and heard what the Church was saying. And I rejected it. I followed my gut, my instinct, my own intelligence, and I found Adolf Hitler and National Socialism. That was by the time I had turned fourteen years of age. And I haven't had to change a thing since that time. What I missed, however, at the beginning, was that these churches DO NOT represent God and the Bible. And so, due to that, and for a time, I espoused atheism.

One, I felt that all could be tied up in a political context and settled in that manner. Two, I however saw quickly that the hard-shell atheists of the Madalyn Murray-O'Hair variety were little different from any run-of-the-mill Clinton Liberal. Three, I personally took the political course as far as it could go and wound up out in the middle of a forty-acre field. Four, I decided that I personally would either validate or debunk the Bible, once and for all. This latter would require STUDY. I attempted it as a youth but fell flat at the start. Now, as an adult in my forties and with a respectable background in a variety of subjects, I'd try it again.

Frankly, I went in looking for three things: Any references to the extraterrestrial; Any references to the racial; And any references to the so-called "anti-Semitic". All of this I found in abundance but I also found one hell of a lot more.

There will be more to come on this later but, for now, suffice it to say that the Bible is not an easy read. I discovered a number of important things in it not apparent to the average person, especially the person dependent upon someone else to explain it to them.

Number One and most obvious is that with this many schisms, this many sects within the nominally "Christian" religion, it's pretty clear that not everyone can be right. After all, there can be but ONE REALITY. Furthermore, in the light of pure reason and facts, everyone CAN BE and, indeed, IS wrong.

Number Two: If there is a solid and realistic correlation to the mythic concept of "God", then there HAS TO BE one to the same concept of "Satan". Exactly as with the concepts of "Good" and "Evil". Good, again, being truth or clarity and Evil being lies and confusion. There was and I found it. But I found more than that. In perfect keeping with lies and distortion, etc., I saw that the realistic, flesh-and-blood "Satan" which moves in this world doesn't even realize that he is Satan. This will become important later on.

God, in the Old Testament, states through the Prophets, that he will permit them "powerful delusion". And so he has. Those who think of themselves and are generally thought of as, "God's Chosen People"... Pure delusion!

I found that the Bible is, if not exactly "coded", then at least couched in such terms as to make it unfathomable to the great masses of people. This was done deliberately. Why? Because to come out nakedly, plainly with the TRUTH as I am doing here in this small book will only get you banned and relegated to the margins, left unknown. The Bible is everywhere even if it is generally not understood. That's the first part accomplished.

The second part concerns those "with understanding", as Saint John liked to say, and they will have come upon the Truth on their own, by themselves, independently, over whatever course, using, as I said earlier, their own instinct and intellect even in the midst of an insane and evil world. And when they are able to then find that same Truth alluded to in the Bible... That is the greatest validation and assurance conceivable!

After a thing like that, you can no longer doubt.

VI

Back again to history being White, perhaps the clincher to this concept is that only White civilizations fall. Colored "civilizations" don't rise and, therefore, can't fall.

China is an excellent example and so is Japan. Ancient beyond calculation but static except where Western contact has enabled them to break out of a medieval setting. Great when it comes to mass production but nowhere when it comes to invention. And life is cheap, very cheap.

North Africa through the Middle East all once was White or at least White-governed. Look at the statues, read the ancient texts. And it held this way largely until around the 1600s when the bottom seems to have opened up. The same for South America when the last Whites first sought refuge on Easter Island and were pursued even there by colored natives and slaughtered.

North America reveals traces of White presence way ahead of the Vikings who, themselves, were at least five hundred years before Columbus.

All of this means only one thing: The absolute importance of White numbers and White solidarity. The case of North America is the best example. Whether by assimilation with natives or being slaughtered by natives, the result is the same: White erasure. The myth of the "Red Man" reveals much. American Indians run the color gamut from almost black to almost white. The ancient Egyptians thought of themselves as "Red Men". The name of our Father, Adam, itself means "ruddy".

Fragile. That's the word not only for White civilization but for the White race itself. It can be spoiled, ruined. Once ruined, it can languish forever as a mess of poverty and misery, never able to rise again. These colonizations of the European nations of the 1800s, going back and retaking these places that once had been White, like Egypt, especially, might compare to the Crusades at the outset of the Thousand Years of Christ mentioned in Revelation. We went back to what was still then remembered as having been OUR Holy Land. What we found was a mess which we had left behind. Hardly even worth exploiting. And today? With their "freedom", "liberty" and "independence"? What have they got? What are they worth?

Africa, the richest continent on earth with regard to natural resources. And Europe, the poorest. Compare them. It is the people themselves together with their innate INDUSTRY that makes the difference.

When God gave the Covenant to Abraham and his descendants, he said that he would make of them, each man, "kings and priests". Weird talk. But it does have real meaning if one takes a look at it. If you only think about it, it means that within each individual will be carried the capacity for self-government. All the laws and all the morals will be in-born, naturally. Higher humanity. NO ONE possesses this quality other than Whites. Look at colored societies. Look at colored enclaves within White societies. Look at the effect of colored presence upon White societies.

Apparently, at the time of Creation, everything was perfectly prepared. The race was perfect along with every piece of the highest technology. This was about a half a million years ago. Probably on Atlantis. The colony was established. Then something went wrong. The Bible alludes to a "war in Heaven", or a war in space. The laboratory experiment got out of control. People now saw that they could reproduce on their own and with anything vaguely, remotely "human". The original sin.

The Flood of Noah was supposed to have wiped out a world phenomenon gone awry. Best guess is that it only wiped out about half. But it afforded a new start. Then the process began anew. Lust and proximity. That's all that is ever required. This domestication of the human type along with lust and proximity. And, of course, TIME...

People wonder with awe at men like Jesus of Nazareth and Adolf Hitler. They need to also look at the time and the place where these men arose, just in the nick of time. They came to buy us more time, to make sure that we arrive on time at that point of destiny written of in the Bible when God himself will step forth and take care, once and for all, of the Satanic influence over and within the affairs of the White race.

The Covenant of Abraham had been lost and spoiled by White, Israelite men chasing dark, Canaanite women in ancient Israel - thus creating "Jews". The assimilation of these native Canaanite types into the Hebrew Temple - along with their own, native customs - caused the destruction of Israel together with the captivity and deportation of the whole people, some ten million it is estimated. Fifty thousand went back to Jerusalem. The rest made it to Europe.

The important thing is that, as recorded by the Great Prophets, our people were purged from this infection sustained by their contact with these Canaanites. This meant that they had to literally "forget" their former selves together with all their tainted, former institutions, etc. But blood tells all. They would rise once more. They would have a "new name". Christ came to throw the final split, once and for all, between the original, Hebrew, Israelite stock and the assimilated Canaanites with their alien blood and alien customs. The Law would be purified, clarified. Christians would go on with the Covenant while Jews would remain behind as the accursed.

But even while we forgot who we were, the Jews never had a clue as to what they were or represented. Blood remains true. Whites, who are the race chosen by God, will fulfill their destiny in spite of anything. Jews, on the other hand, deluded into thinking they are "God's Chosen People", will attempt to fulfill this delusion on the basis of conspiracy, literally on the backs of the Whites who have been carrying out the Covenant, albeit unconsciously, throughout. But these Jews will bring into the picture all of their old, native Canaanite customs born into their blood and, by these instincts, will threaten to pollute and destroy everything.

Satan doesn't know he is Satan. Who, indeed, would go on in the same path if he knew it was for him that the fire was waiting?

Christ, by his sacrifice, gave us the impetus for the last, great phase of civilization: Western, Christian Civilization. This included the Thousand Years of Christ mentioned in Revelation. It is NOT in the future. It is in the PAST.

That played out completely by 1945 when the Jewish, Marxist world conspiracy succeeded in extending its military-economic-philosophical dictatorship over the entire globe. Adolf Hitler came at the last possible moment to actually establish "God's will on earth" by founding the Third Reich in Germany, a truly RACIAL STATE. When, in April of 1945, just moments before his death, he was asked by his faithful servants, "Who do we fight for now? His response was, "For the coming man." This referred to the return of Jesus Christ. After the Thousand Years of Christ there was, according to Revelation, to be "Satan's Little Season".

The existence of this Jewish-Satanic conspiracy is documented far beyond any possibility of it being doubted. If you personally haven't seen any of this, then that only testifies to the efficiency of their media control. If any of it should come to light accidentally, as with the "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion", they'll blow it off by calling it a "forgery". But a forgery of what? If that should even be the case, then they are and have been meticulously following a "forged" blueprint!

I've said that much can be learned even by observing the words and actions of liars. Conspiracy is real and can be identified, along with the person of the conspirators themselves. What is the target, what is being attacked by this conspiracy? The heart and core of White, Western, Christian Civilization... The very Godly and natural order of things.

Christ said that to spoil a strong man's house, one must first bind the strong man. By removing the strength of his COMMUNITY, the White man is effectively bound and helpless. That's what all this push for "freedom" and "liberty" has done. Look at the course of civilization over the last hundred years, look at the social movements, the outcome of wars, etc. It is the work of Satan and his dupes. All striving tirelessly to keep their appointment out there, somewhere in the future, where God awaits them with his final judgement.

VII

The accounts of the falls of civilizations seem to be better understandable than the rises. That would be, at least, to us here at present. For, minus that one, great critical awareness of the destiny of the race, what else could really guide things? I started off this essay with the phrase, "Do it or you'll die." Well, that about sizes it up as neatly as possible.

The battle with the elements, for example. Think and plan providently ahead or you'll freeze to death in winter. The battle against wild animal predators. You'll either use your intellect and coordinate with your fellows or you'll become just another prey. The battle against hunger. Hunting was full-time and unless you sharpened your skills and, again, coordinated, it would be pretty hit or miss and starvation would be the result. The battle against disease. Early and large families were the only insurance against this. Over time and hard selection, only a tough strain would emerge to resist disease, etc.

Exactly as with the Alpha wolf, leadership was primary and something in-born, a matter of heredity and personality. The existence or non-existence of the tribe depended upon this. There could be no question and no challenge unless or until old age or death took place. And, even then, things usually passed from father to son. Kingship. And it worked flawlessly well.

There were no racially mixed primitive tribes. Outsiders, or "strangers", as they are called in the Bible, were kept outside of the extended family, the tribe or the nation. Exactly as with different species of animals, wars would take place, generally over territories. There was much slaughter. Men, women and children. And just like any of the above challenges, here was a test to see who was worthy of survival as a GROUP because it all came down to that: The mettle of the SPECIES and what it can do with and for itself.

I've seen positively that civilizations fall in exactly the same manner, with all of the same symptoms. There can be no question that they also rise the way. They don't fall at once and they don't rise at once. But I have compared the whole process to a playground slippery slide. Going up is one careful step at a time until you reach the top. But going down... That's the "fun" part.

In those harsh beginnings, families stuck together and struggled hard just in order to survive. And you survived just in order to go on fighting hard to survive further. Little reward except your next lung-full of air. They say that men, by their very design, are built for a short and brutal life. Women, on the other hand, are made for a long and miserable existence. That's certainly the animal part of it and it is undeniable. Humans are part of nature.

They have as yet to find a credible "missing link" between man and animal. Hoaxes and guesses that are far too wild and tenuous to be taken as serious are all that have been presented. But, if as I have said, the REAL difference between man and animal is his capacity to DEVELOP, then "missing links" abound everywhere. They are passing as "human beings" and we are presently outnumbered by them on this planet by ten-to-one. And, as Commander George Lincoln Rockwell put it, so it might be understood by the common man, when regarding nominally "human" types, it goes like this: "The darker, the dumber."

Darwin's evolution explains much that is obvious. Maybe it wasn't as obvious for the rest - that unexplained jump - until we had shot into space for ourselves and had unlocked DNA. But now it is, for those unafraid to look reality in the face. But then, there has always been the saying that any farmer in his barn yard will know the value of good breeding. One past acquaintance of mine liked to say, "Back where I come from we breed animals, we don't fuck 'em."

I've said that the evidence points to a perfect creation, suddenly. Apes were taken and infused with extraterrestrial DNA. Different species of apes were tried. Different races of man were the result, each with different levels of performance. Time would tell. Our fathers from space had literally all the time in the world, in the universe. They obviously had time and all other obstacles beaten. They were and are still the "Alpha and the Omega".

By the time God gave Abraham and his descendants the Covenant, man had already been around for an incredibly long time. The high civilization of Atlantis had come and gone. The laboratory experiment now was pretty clear. Pure Whites were the most resilient, the ones who would one day reach back out into space and rejoin the Father. The rest, as they say, were "dead races", without development.

I must pause here and remind the reader that this whole "time" thing is very critical to bear in mind. Simply, it has all already taken place. For, otherwise, there would be no way for all of it to have been recorded in the Bible from start to finish. That is, unless the Bible itself is bunk. And, unfortunately, those into whose hands its care has fallen are doing their utmost to make it look that way to by far most of the people. But, trick is, even that much was recorded and predicted in the Bible.

So from a perfect state down to barbarism, again and again. Development spoiled, poisoned, interrupted, lost. White COHESION lost. Awareness only applied to naked survival on the most fundamental level. Truths left behind soon took on the quality of myths. Myths could be misinterpreted or discounted altogether. So much for "religion".

Families coming together as tribes. Tribes coming together as nations. And then there were states. Development. Greater numbers, greater coordination, greater strength. Society became complex. The old, deadly challenges were met and were beaten. External enemies were subdued through conquest. These might be killed, expelled or made slaves of. States went from kingdoms to empires. Now there were others to handle even the most menial of chores for the masters. And, most of all, there now was "leisure time". Time for foolishness to set in. Time for self-indulgence, ego and falsehood to take over. And, I might add, room for liars to move in.

I have always stood in amazement, for example, at the degree of awareness the ancient Greeks had of Atlantis. The Egyptians, who gave it to them, took this knowledge as par for the course. And we are talking about a span of time covering at least seven thousand years and probably more by that time. When Raleigh and Elizabeth the First would exchange correspondence, they would refer to England as "Israel". And that was over two thousand years later. Today, nobody seems to recall anything. Much danger in that.

It seems to have followed this pattern: Empire is reached. All challenges are met. If anything, profit has taken over from necessity as the governing rule. They never much recognized RACE as the core of everything and so now how could they be expected to? They are in love with themselves, enamored of themselves and their accomplishments, their institutions. What better compliment, tribute to themselves than to have former adversaries, former slaves accepting and assimilating into their own customs? New "citizens".

From out of the Old Testament is the story of King Solomon's Mines. Eighteen months out and eighteen months back is what the journey took. Some have placed the destination in what is now called "Zimbabwe", formerly the Crown Colony of Rhodesia, in southern Africa. Ancient structures exist there that couldn't even be built by the modern, "civilized", liberated Negroes of the region. These expeditions would return to Jerusalem laden with every kind of precious gem and mineral. They would also bear cargoes of - in the words of the Old Testament - "apes". Do you think these were really apes or were they Negro slaves?

The average Jew today contains a small percentage of Negro blood in his veins. For most of the remainder, it is Near East or Hittite blood. And the Hittites and their relatives were the mortal enemies of ancient Israel in the beginning. They had walled cities and "chariots of iron". God commanded they either be killed or completely driven out. The Bible records that they were conquered, many were killed, but that many more were put to paying tribute within the confines of the new, Israelite state.

Rather like these American Indians. Except they fought so hard that the Whites were obliged to practically drive them to extinction. There were not enough of them left to make their assimilation into White society a serious consideration or threat. When you see one off the reservation today, it is usually some poor, drunken derelict on the street corner. But not so with the Negro slaves imported from Africa. And not so with the Canaanite natives - Hittites among them - of ancient Israel.

They were accepted into the Hebrew Temple and, along with them, many of their native, tribal ways. "New citizens". I'll bet there were "laws" protecting them, too. Now everyone, White Israelite and colored Canaanite, were all "equal" within the corrupted and compromised Hebrew Temple. All were now "Jews". The nation collapsed, exactly as God had warned. By the time of Christ, the original White, Hebrew, Israelite stock had fallen to one-third. The whole place was a vassal to Rome. The Romans themselves appointed the Jewish Herodian kings as the "democratic" choice to please the majority.

So what really was left? Some badly corrupted, old institutions left over by the original founders: "Judaism" shared among an alien and bastardized population. Names like "Judah Ben-Hur", if you caught the Hollywood film. This continued until the time of Napoleon when he ordered the Jews of Europe to assimilate or else. There exists a volume known as the "Semi-Gotha" which records the original names of these Jewish families alongside the "European" names they adopted. Names taken from the surrounding flora and fauna like "Goldstein", "Silverberg", "Lowenstein", "Sobelsohn", etc.

And today, in contemporary America, when you walk down the street and encounter a person named "Washington", "Jackson" or "Jefferson", what is it that you usually have other than an assimilated Negro? Rotten, old forms and institutions that stand only as a shakey framework for this current abomination to cling to for shape and substance. All form but no real function. Certainly of no use or benefit to the Whites who originated them but who allowed them to become compromised.

VIII

Looking back at the shape we as a race were in as of about three thousand years ago, I marvel sometimes at how we made it at all.

Egypt, as heir to Atlantis' world empire, had crumbled due to this very same racial admixture and philosophical corruption. Aryan India was going the same way. A Levite priest named Moses took the final three million Whites from out of Egypt and literally into the wilderness to escape a sure demise within the rotten, cosmopolitan environment of Egypt. After a full generation of this wandering in the desert, most of the adverse conditioning from inside of Egypt had died off and a new, tough generation had been raised up. It was time to go and seize territory for themselves so that they might be a nation.

Racial separatists here in the present talk of the North West as a refuge for Whites. There in that time it was the most northeasterly province of Egypt itself: Canaan. But there were the constant "natives" which the White man has met wherever he has gone. "Native" to me as a child growing up in the Fifties and early Sixties meant only one thing: Some kind or another of colored type. So it was there as well.

Canaan. It began as the name of a person. The youngest son of Noah - Ham - had offended both the Lord and Noah. Therefore, a curse was placed upon one of Ham's descendants, Canaan, to be borne throughout eternity. For the rest of the "Hamites", they quickly devolved down to the level of little better than Negroes themselves and no endeavor of theirs, from planting crops to anything else, was ever to bear fruit.

The Canaanites proper - Hittites, Hivites, Perizzites, Jebusites, Girgashites, Amorites, etc. - weren't quite as sunken and had produced some level of civilization of their own. Petra - a city carved from out of the living stone - may still be visited today, there, out in the desert of what was known at the time as "Edom". Those fabled "walled cities", like Jericho and even Jerusalem, defended by those "chariots of iron" were going to be formidable obstacles to be overcome by the Israelites. But the White man, once he has gotten it all together, is an unstoppable force.

The author, Madison Grant, said of the American Indians that there was never a more terrible military threat to White nation-building than this. That they even exceeded the ferocity of Genghis Khan himself. Hard to imagine today but it did require almost four hundred years following Columbus before their threat was finally extinguished. This does not count the unknowable, earlier attempts on the part of other Whites - Celts and Vikings - before Columbus who had come here and, again, were either annihilated or assimilated by the native Indians.

This is a good comparison for the sake of proper perspective but there existed a huge difference between Indians and Canaanites. The Indians were nomadic. The Canaanites, as has been said, built cities. The Indians had nothing by way of religious custom that was even about to be taken within the Christian Church of that day. The Canaanites, on the other hand, when they had been conquered and assimilated en masse into the Hebrew Temple, brought with them many of their old, pagan ways. And while there was some mixing going on between White pioneers and Indian squaws, the practice wasn't widespread and was certainly frowned upon by decent, White society. The offspring were outcasts. But even such as King David himself fell enamored of such as Bathsheba, "wife of Uriah the Hittite".

I am convinced that much by way of prophecy within the Old Testament was written retrospectively. "Here is the way it turned out and they should have known better in the beginning." Most of this was written from within "concentration camp" settings as most of the ancient Israelites had been deported by invading Assyrians and Babylonians. It remains a marvel at how much and how well their ancient history and heritage could be recalled and set down, especially under such circumstances. Finally, those who did set it down were in each and every case those who had been found IN OPPOSITION to all this cosmopolitanism, this assimilationism, this mixing, this "democracy".

It was a time for recrimination. The Holy Land, the "Land of Milk and Honey" had been blown off and lost, utterly, by this foolishness. Why had the stupid ones been found in control while the old and the faithful were out of the loop? That same answer would apply to today's situation here, in what is left of the United States after several generations of assimilationism.

But if a person takes a careful look at the writings of the Old Testament prophets, he will notice something right away. After each and every cursing and damnation of the wickedness of the ancient Israelites there was a promise of greatness to be recaptured in a distant time and place. A thing like that under circumstances like those required more than faith. It had to be SHOWN.

Ezekiel is perhaps the best example of this but there are plenty others. These prophets were taken up physically, transported through time, and literally shown the future of their people. And then they were instructed to set it down in writing. They wrote what they saw. When it came to high technology, these men whose "technology" didn't go past the chariot, described space vehicles and space flight that really reads like pure mythology, then and now. But they did lay out the future. And no one better or more finally than Saint John when writing in the very last book of the New Testament, Revelation.

Modern science fiction writers have struggled with this concept. How and why to send a message back from the future to the past. Simply because it remains variable, as I have said earlier. To me, this remains strangest of all.

Here's what I think: The most signal personality and event of the Twentieth Century was Adolf Hitler and the Second World War. Yet they are not mentioned at all in the Bible. Or are they? Jesus was mentioned by Isaiah five hundred years before his appearance, though not by name. His CIRCUMSTANCES, however, were very clearly laid out. The very final passages of the Old Testament refer to the coming of an "Elijah" who will turn the hearts of the fathers to their children and vice versa, who either will be heeded or the earth will be smitten by a curse. And then, in Revelation and elsewhere, there is described a terrible war of fire and fury which is described as Armageddon. Neither have been seen as yet. Or have they?

"Before the dark and terrible day of the Lord." Dark and terrible because by far most people will be way off in some Communistic Never-Never Land of Make-Believe which has little or nothing to do with the will and purpose of God. And how they hate Hitler for this exact, same reason. Hitler performed a flat-out MIRACLE when he united the German people - the transposed Israelite Tribe of Judah - and managed to literally THROW OFF the attack of Satan - in the form of "Social Democratic" and Communist Jews. From there, these same Jews and their lackeys in the rest of the world vowed vengeance for this act of resistance.

They managed to use old nationalistic divisions in order to foment the Second World War. The united German folk worked prodigies in holding back the rest of the Jewish-dominated world. As the German military veterans themselves wrote afterward, once things tipped the five-to-one ratio, the Germans had to begin falling back. In the meantime, from the air, came the fire-bombing raids against German civilian targets, the cities themselves. Pure murder. Not even the nuclear attacks upon two Japanese cities came anywhere close to the destruction and loss of innocent life caused by these "conventional" thousand-plane raids.

I think here was Elijah and here was Armageddon. There certainly has come "a new world" out of the ashes just as promised by John in Revelation. The Jews sought to ERASE Germany for its having so successfully resisted their attempted take-over. Today it is the third largest economy in the world. True, there is much wrong in Germany today, the despicable Social Democrats are back in power... but only due to continued enemy military occupation in the form of U.S. troops. (Recall that the Soviets have departed.)

Sacrifice. Isn't that the heart and core of the Christian religion? Hitler and Germany made the sacrifice for all the rest of us. A much bigger deal, on a much grander scale than what took place in Judea two thousand years ago. What was seen by the prophets HAD TO TAKE PLACE. As it was explained to me by a Greek Orthodox priest, Jesus foretold of the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans in 66 AD. "Pray that it doesn't happen in winter." It's GOING TO HAPPEN but it could be much worse if it happens in winter. It did not happen in winter. And that seems to be how it works.

Germany took the brunt and it was over before the atomic bomb was ready. The furious and outraged Jews - whose physicists had literally made the bomb - were so bloodthirsty at that point that they had to use it, instead, against a prostrate Japan who even then was looking for a way out of the war.

The sacrifice of Christ? Minus the sight of him having returned from the dead and it is most unlikely that his apostles would have found the courage to go on to spread the renewed doctrine of truth to, as Jesus referred to them, "the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel".

Israel, or the Israelite people, gave birth to not only Classical Civilization - Greece and Rome - but also to Western Civilization which took its place, in turn, when it, too, fell victim to cosmopolitanism and race-mixing.

Imagine had the truths imparted by God remained lost and sunken in the hands of these Canaanite Jews had not Christ come along and revived everything on the basis of race. The Whites now with the new Christianity and the Jews left and stuck with the old, corrupt Hebrew Temple. That's why the Jews rejected Christianity, on the basis of RACE. That's why they duped the Romans into murdering him. Satan's plan all fouled up. History held on track... for the time being.

IX

Here just mentioned in the previous chapter is a critical point not to be overlooked. The matter of institutions. We create these in order to benefit ourselves. We created them, they didn't create us. And this carries right on up to the State itself. We left Egypt when it went rotten. We left Israel when it went rotten. We even left the languages and the religions when they went rotten. Because nothing matters except blood. Everything man-made must go to serve the betterment of that or else it is no good. Unless it does serve the betterment and the future of the blood, it is not only useless, it is EVIL.

We've gone into the same dynamics behind the rise and fall of civilizations. It is a natural thing, even if deplorable. Saint Paul said of this that, previously, God had even "winked" at this sort of thing but now it was time to give it serious thought and react accordingly.

His "carnal" versus "spiritual" could easily be extended to this concept of old institutions now having gone rotten and been infected by assimilation of racial strangers. All now being "equal", all within this artificial framework being "Jews" or "Americans" according to the times and manners. So, according to this lame-brain line of thought, if you're "one of us", if you "believe as we do", then you're good enough to marry my daughter. End of the line.

Superstition has now led to the destruction of the very blood itself. India, Africa or Haiti... here we come! And there AIN'T NO coming back!

At the point where all the outward challenges were met by our early societies - if not before - we should have reached the level of knowing that it had been the RACE all along that was of paramount importance. This so that things could have been held on track and not permitted to slip and slide, to degenerate and then fall to pieces in a welter of silly garbage and man-made nonsense of gobbledegook thoughts of "freedom", "equality" and "democracy".

Because when these other considerations make the scene, all safe and made secure by the sacrifices of our pioneer ancestors who'd have killed any foolish idiot to have come up with them on the frontier, then all of the old values begin to be made to look silly.

Now the institutions are bent to accommodate crazy ideas and to accept strangers. What it means is that - though no one can catch it - nothing contains any real meaning any longer. As the prophets said of dying, ancient Israelite society, every move and decision made was predicated upon three things: Iniquity, hypocrisy and folly. For what does any of it serve?

Not "God". There are more so-called "religions" going here at present than one can count. They all can't be right but they all can be wrong. It's been observed that two philosophies can't exist side-by-side unless at least one of them is dead. In the present case, I assure you, it is Christianity - or what they like to refer to as "Judeo-Christianity" - that is dead. It no longer serves the race. Any "believer" is as good as the next and can "marry your daughter".

Misreading, misunderstanding. Even the U.S. Constitution itself is out the window now. "All men are created equal." Remember this was penned by SLAVE-HOLDERS? It meant WHITE MEN!

Madness. Meaninglessness. And with the force of the State itself behind it to enforce it. That is the definition of the BEAST.

What is "society" now? Mainly property rights. The Ten Commandments are out the window. You think not? The philosophy of meaninglessness and formlessness has the art of calling everything by another name. Murder is a prime example. In ancient Israel they were sacrificing infants to the Canaanite god, Moloch. Here it is called abortion. And it is protected by LAW. (For the record, I say that abortion can be a tool for the advancement of the race if applied to birth defects and racial mongrelization that can be seen coming ahead of time. But never just for the hell or "convenience" of it!)

A people's culture goes ahead of its blood. How about crazy, meaningless "modern art"? You can see anything you want in it but, essentially, what you see is nothing, anarchy. Music and literature have gone the same way. Reliance upon "astrologers" and "monthly prognosticators" was everywhere in dying Israel. So were "sorcerers". That latter term is a flub in translation. Sorcery should have read pharmaceea: Narcotics. Talk about form without function. The best example of this is the over-sexing of this jaded society. The act itself is the emphasis, not the function of the act: Procreation of the RACE!

I'm not immune to this phenomenon of human nature. I used to, as a kid, resent the hell out of everything being dead and closed down on Sundays. How boring! And what was the use? God said to keep the Sabbath holy. Whether Saturday or Sunday, that matters not. The reality of the situation is that without these "rests", these "breaks" things become formless. And formlessness, as I've mentioned, is a very big aspect of the enemy.

I've spelled out my conviction before that God's very name - Yahweh or "I Am That I Am" - literally means physics. Also as a kid I had a tremendous fascination for home movies. And it truly amazed me when I saw that film footage, when passing before the lamp of the projector, actually STOPPED with each frame for a mere fraction of a second. If it did not do this, the result would be an unintelligible mass of blur. That is physics and the same can be applied directly to human affairs.

A term I encountered in reading Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf", is "delimitation". The original German I do not know. But some translator took that and made this of it. I haven't found it in any dictionary. But delimitation could be directly correlated to mean FORM. Form as applied to everything. Time, physics, everything. Making order, making sense. Even striving toward an IDEAL. You

And the Thousand Years of Christ ended and "Satan's Little Season" began.

Revelation states that Satan will be bound for a thousand years and then he will escape from his prison to again deceive the nations. The "bottomless pit" is what Saint John called it.

After all sorts of mischief making in Europe - from financial usury, to child murder, to the spreading of the Black Death, to the inviting of the Mongols down onto European nations - the Jews were banished and confined to what was known as the Pale of Settlement. This was roughly most of western Russia, including Poland.

As we have already covered, things "liberalized" in Europe once most of the immediate, physical threats had been overcome. People, still not seeing race as the key, were content to accept Jews who had either professed "Christianity" or who had otherwise assimilated. Jews, always acting as an organism, went back to work.

The French Revolution. All the main players from Robespierre to Danton were Jews. Here was the "Illuminati" at work which later gave way to the Communist Manifesto of the Jew, Karl Marx. They inflamed the mob. "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" was the cry.

Had not the recent, comparative ease of existence rendered the old, established institutions as seeming harsh, silly and unnecessary and the hereditary leaders as mere tyrants and worse than useless, the whole effort would have never gotten off the ground. The world's first Communist revolution. Order wasn't restored until the coming of Napoleon.

Funny to note that the revolution eventually consumed its own progenitors - to the Guillotine - exactly as with those of the subsequent Russian Revolution - another exclusively Jewish affair - a century later. There was, however, one more striking similarity between these two terrible events.

In recent years there has been the popular, media spectacle known as "The DaVinci Code". Among other things, it claims that Jesus was married to Mary Magdalene and that they had at least one offspring together. Of all the "evidence" that this theory cites as proof of this union, I've never heard them refer to the Biblical Wedding at Cana written of in the Gospels.

Couched in typically cryptic terms, this is the literal description of the marriage between Jesus and Mary Magdalene. Everyone was there for this huge occasion. Jesus' mother, Mary, all of the Disciples, and Mary Magdalene. It was the first recorded time Jesus performed a miracle: Turning water into wine. First, the groom is not named. Second, it is the responsibility of the groom to provide wine for the guests. Third, no rabbi, then or now, could be unmarried.

One tradition has it that this union produced one daughter, Sarah. Another has it that three offspring were produced. Going along with the one daughter theory, tradition has it that Saint John - whom Jesus had entrusted with the care of his family after his death - along with the help of Jesus' uncle, Joseph of Aramathea, got them to southern France to escape the fury of Jewish persecution following the crucifixion. From there Sarah married into European royalty. And from that time until this, the royals of Europe have consistently intermarried.

After a thousand years, even one offspring might have multiplied to 144,000. The nobility of Europe. The heads of the Christian states of Europe. Each one of these representing the "lost", travelled Tribes of Israel. "The Lost Sheep of the House of Israel". After each of these so-called "revolutions" - the French and the Russian - what did these Jewish leaders do but EXTERMINATE the royal houses of these respective lands?

(In the case of Russia, the Bolshevik - or "Majority" - Jews killed the Czar and his family under the Red flag. Red, the Biblical color of Edom, or racial Jewry.)

It was said earlier that by the late Nineteenth Century at least, all of the nations of the West found themselves in the same boat. Why not? They were all brothers and all subject to the same malady.

The First World War was engineered by more of these same Jews - now in the position of powerful international financiers - to suddenly overturn and destroy as much of the Christian, European order as possible. Toward this end they utilized the longings of national minorities within these great empires to provide the spark of war. "Freedom". And when the issue appeared to be stalemated, they enlisted the deciding help of the United States and those poor devils who went and died did so for the sake of "democracy". It was the best killing the best all for some insane, crazy notion of "freedom" and "liberty".

And then the reaction of the Fascist movements in Europe. Following the devastation, the loss of life, the overturning of the ancient order, the most obvious and immediate Jewish threat of Communism, there arose throughout Central and Eastern Europe respective Fascist movements to attempt to restore some semblance of decent order. Interesting that the Romanian version of this, the Iron Guard, referred to the Italian version of this as placing emphasis upon the State, their own version with emphasis upon the Church, while the German version placed all emphasis upon RACE.

In the West, the so-called "democracies" that "won" the War, things were not really much better. The social upheaval that took place as a result of the War had taken its toll. Women into the factories, colored colonials under arms. The West didn't have the physical presence of masses of racial Jews to rise up and decide the military issue in favor of outright Communists in sudden takeover. But these same Jews were deeply entrenched in the old, existing but rotten institutions. This is referred to as "Fabian Socialism". Subtle Communist takeover.

Back to the "Old Bolsheviks" being hounded to death by the likes of Joseph Stalin by the mid-1930s, it is instructive to note the way Leon Trotsky - Jew and Lenin's right-hand man - was first forced to leave Russia and then be expelled from one Western country after another, denied sanctuary. Why was this? How could this be? On the orders of Stalin. And who responded to these orders other than the respective governments of these supposed "democracies" in the West. One cannot tell me that the Second World War wasn't a global put-on by these same Communist types in order to get rid of their final, serious resistance in the world.

But reaction to naked Communist assault wasn't the only thing animating these various Fascist movements across Europe. It was the common social maladies that needed urgently to be addressed. The hollowness of the old institutions which had rendered them vulnerable to Communist, Jewish subversion. The very real plight of labor. The disintegration of the culture itself. And the static or falling birthrate.

Distant history will record all of this as an attempt at a great revival of Western Civilization. A last-minute attempt to halt the march of destruction of a magnificent people and culture. And it might have succeeded had it not been for the nations of the West, the "democracies", their institutions still intact but in Jewish hands, going to war against Europe itself which was well on its way to settling the problem militarily.

I cannot over-emphasize that the end of the Second World War signalled the end of the Thousand Years of Christ and the beginning of Satan's Little Season. It is the global lock of this Communistic outlook that has to be focused upon.

XI

Far be it from us, not being Conservative, to waste space on how Communism literally swept the colored world following the close of the Second World War. It's only worth pointing out that this did signal the collapse of the respective colonial empires of Europe. It gave us Vietnam, etc.

We are only interested in White societies, what benefits them, what afflicts them. If we are able to take a set of symptoms and attach a name to them, then it may be helpful in understanding the malady. Those collective symptoms of sickness, when codified into a philosophy, are what actual Communism is all about.

So what if Asia, Africa and South America go Communist or any other way? Our sole concern is what goes on within and among the White nations of Europe and North America. As I've said, if the White man has it all together for himself, there can be no enemy worth worrying about. But, as Christ said of the sad and sorry shape his Judea found itself in, having fallen as it had from an empire itself, no one is going to be able to spoil a strong man's house unless they first bind that strong man.

The wrong side won the Second World War because that represented a crossroads for Western Civilization. Two good societies fought each other and many good and brave people died. The conflict was at the top. Hitler, Mussolini and their other European allies represented that Western Revival I spoke of. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin were tools of the One-World Conspiracy. But, as I've said, had any of that been somehow averted, it would have invalidated the Bible. It will be Evil which stands alone on earth to face God at the time of his return.

What the outcome of the War did, however, was loosen the final underpinnings of the former structure of White society. Whether anyone realized it or chose to admit it, at the very foundation was RACE. All else had been built up around that in order to safeguard and perpetuate the race. Now, with "racism" literally a dirty word, the nucleus had been removed from the atom. All the rest might very properly be felt to hold no real meaning or purpose. And so, one by one, they began to go down.

We've mentioned delimitation. There is also restraint. I suppose delimitation could compare to only the correct ingredients going into a careful formula. Restraint could compare to a harmless, ineffectual pile of gun powder as opposed to a powerful and deadly rifle shot. Perhaps these two concepts might represent the twin pillars of civilization.

Overlooking race as the center of all or having race deliberately ridiculed and downplayed by aliens, the result is going to be the same. With perhaps one big difference: Time. The time it is going to take for the structure to fall. Things have been in trouble, even in bad shape, for over a century. But the watershed only commenced following the Second World War. In short, I saw it happen.

The title for this essay is "Tyranny of Freedom". What I am saying is that, at least since the Post War era, people - White people - have had NO CHOICE in the direction their societies have taken. Because, if as I maintain, RACE is the key factor behind everything, then where have any of these politicians since that time until now stood on the matter of race? And what of the media? What of the educational system? What of the Church?

The normal, average, trusting person might take all the above and conclude that this position of "tolerance", "acceptance" and "equality" must be the only correct one. They will do their best to look at colored "citizens" who are "making it" and take that for confirmation of this. But they'll stay out of colored neighborhoods, especially after dark. Even if one has the capacity, he can't voice an opposing opinion. For if he should, then HE'LL become the outcaste of this society, maybe in line for legal retribution, maybe even physical harm.

And in a country still 50% White?! That IS a tyranny. What else could it be? Lock-step all the way. No "two sides" to this story. No "tolerance" where question on the issue of race comes up. They've SILENCED their opposition. The facts, the evidence, all of history itself supports my side but who ever bothers about that? Who has the time, the inclination or the capacity to delve into any of that? People, as ever, work their jobs and go about their lives content to let others do their thinking and decision-making for them.

You may begin to see how comparatively easy it is to take over control of a society. My old friend and mentor, Dr. William Pierce, would say that it once was gold that did this in order to buy the leaders. But as of the Twentieth Century, it became more gold to buy the media and get everyone thinking a certain way. They'll reflect that back onto their so-called "representatives" - who probably have been bought and paid for anyway - and the "democratic process" scores another goal.

Jesus called them - the Jews - children of their father, the Devil, who was a liar and a murderer from the beginning. I say that they are deluded into believing they are "God's Chosen People". That notwithstanding, they do not represent a true race of man. Their appearance is marked in Second Kings, 16:6. That is, over halfway through the Old Testament. They are a hybrid. With perhaps a faint touch of the blood of Abraham, the rest being those same Hittites, Hivites, Gargashites, Perizzites and Jebusites I named earlier.

The White man has dealt with many an alien race of people in the past but NONE which have afflicted him like an internal parasite, the way these Jews have done. God, as recorded in Exodus, Joshua, etc., commanded of Israel to kill or expel all of these Canaanite tribes absolutely or else they would become their destruction. The Israelites did not and the Canaanites did. They absorbed the Hebrew Temple, assimilated into the population as "citizens", as "equals" and became JEWS.

Their very existence is predicated upon a lie, therefore. Race implies breeds. We study breeds of dogs. Differences don't stop at the size and the shape of the animal. It goes all the way into the brain. Their temperament, how they act and react, what may be expected from them. It is no different with human types. Even into this benighted time, when one thinks of a Jew, he thinks of a crook, a shyster. These are the people who have owned your politicians, your media, your educational system, your financial system and everything else for well over a century. And now it really comes to reflect it.

But that's not the end of it. The Jews of today and for a very long time past have sub-divided themselves into two distinct groups: Sephardim and Ashkenazim. The first group, the Sephardic Jews, are the Biblical Jews, the Canaanite Jews I've been discussing. But the ones who killed Christ. Surprising that they constitute but 20% of the total of World Jewry today. The second group, the Ashkenazic Jews, began as the Khazars of southern Russia whose empire, about 800 AD, converted en masse to Judaism. (As fanciful as it may sound, you can find them in any good historical map or dictionary.) And they comprise 80% of those calling themselves Jews today.

Eighty percent and coming from 800 AD? That might even rule the Jews out as having any claim whatever to Biblical right or, especially, to any claim over the former Holy Land. But it's not done. Remember that I studied and validated the Bible from a non-religious standpoint and what I learned about these Ashkenazic Jews truly astounded me and remains one of the main pedestals of my own validation of the Bible.

The Bible mentions Gog and Magog which will lead the colored billions of the earth against Israel at the end of time, thus triggering the final showdown between God and Satan. There is much more of this in Ezekiel than in Revelation. I was thrilled as I read God's words in Ezekiel as he rises to greet his old adversary, Gog and Magog, at the final confrontation. He has been waiting a long time for this.

And there is reason to believe that "Armageddon" and the "Day of the Lord" are two separate occasions. I think we have witnessed Armageddon but that the Day of the Lord is yet to come.

Some cross-referencing between Biblical genealogy and the 1911 edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica would seem to confirm that these same Ashkenazic, or Khazar Jews do represent Gog and Magog in prophecy. They are racially related to the Canaanite, Sephardic Jews. And, as this book is about, race tells. How would Ezekiel have known this? A man who lived five hundred years before Christ of an event which wouldn't take place - that is, the conversion of the Khazars to Jews - for over another thousand years? I was stunned, astounded.

Well, we in the National Socialist Movement always knew that Jews were prime movers behind Communism, race-mixing, etc. But to have discovered something like THIS in the Bible! That is part of the kind of confirmation that I have been talking about when referring to the Bible's own, very cryptic language. And they don't teach you about THIS in church.

Perhaps the crux of all this is that, formerly, before there even were Jews in existence upon the planet, this cycle of the rise and fall of civilizations had long been on going. But it had required many centuries for the cycle to complete. And one, like Saint Paul, could almost have considered the whole thing as a big "accident".

Not any more. The Jews have taken charge, made this fall of a great civilization into their own "cause" - call it Communism or call it "democracy" - and have laid a very deep, deliberate - and very traceable - CONSPIRATORIAL TRAIL which can be studied and examined and which has pushed and guided this same social destruction along at a lightening pace, all so that they might assume the helm over a totally bastardized world. David Ben-Gurion, the first prime minister of the new, counterfeit "Israel" had no difficulty in laying this out during interviews.

Their being is a lie. Their weapon is the lie. Now let's look at the way they have been wielding that weapon and the results it has had for the rest of us.

XII

Civilization reached its height in the West by about the Eighteenth Century. With most of the former strictures dropping off one by one, with nothing actually solid to step in and provide the direction and the purpose, and with the new "Liberalism" which served, among other things, to release Satan from his prison - or permit the Jews back into White society - the stage was set.

The nations of Europe were absolutely secure, militarily invulnerable from attack by any foreign, colored force. The Christian monarchies were secure. The culture still flowered at its height. Science and invention were exploding. The conquest of the remainder of the globe by these European empires was at its very climax.

At the center seemed to be the Christian Church but, once more, there were two critical factors which were to render the Church utterly vulnerable and helpless to really serve and protect the respective populations: Race was not understood or appreciated; Jews were totally misunderstood and, worse, as in the case of Cromwell and his Puritans, etc., they were mistakenly seen as "The Chosen People". This was a disaster waiting to happen and happen it did.

The French Revolution, the other, failed revolutions in Europe of 1848, the American Civil War, the First World War, the Russian Revolution, the Second World War. Besides the dreadful loss of White life, at each of these turns came a further loosening of the remaining structure of White society, of civilization itself. From "Liberty, Equality & Fraternity", to "Free the Slaves", to "Make the World Safe For Democracy", to "I Come To Liberate Europe". "Headway", most seemed to have taken it as then, milestones on the upward path of mankind.

But somehow it has led us to where we find ourselves at present. And where we find ourselves is smack in the middle of the Beast System, with things becoming worse all the time. And still the cry and the slogan stays the same. The driving personalities behind the scenes - and many in front - remain the same. And it is Whites and their fortunes which do the paying and the suffering.

Seriously, if you are in the least bit inclined to look for or even suspect the presence of a "Beast", I couldn't imagine what else you might be expecting. The overly dramatic, the "Demon" which will never appear? Something like off of these Jewish-controlled movie and television screens? Or perhaps just, as mentioned at the beginning, "control" itself. The control is here sure enough, most will agree, but it's still all nice and "democratic", everyone is still eating well enough. Any problem might be resolved in the next election.

On the subject of control for its own sake, we inevitably come back around again to "freedom". Though race is at its core, there exists a standing criminal element in the United States. They are subsidized by welfare and they are guarded by Constitutional as well as "Civil" rights. But the reality remains. And so the question: Why maintain a criminal element within the country?

The answer is in three parts: One, it represents a "cash crop" to be continually "harvested" by police to fuel what amounts to this country's only growing industry... Prison; Two, these growing masses of coloreds within the society - all under the same umbrella of corrupted culture and laws with the rest - serve to poison the national bloodstream and; Three, the non-stop, slow-motion crime wave which they represent serves as the cover, the excuse for the Beast to clamp down ever more control over the rest of us. It's in the name of "freedom".

Not even Orwell, writing in his novel, "1984", could have imagined this plague of coloreds, this plague of rotten culture, this plague of dope and immorality as being key to the Beast's ever-tightening control. Not control as an end but as a means toward an end: The erasure of decent society and the extinction of higher humanity.

A decent society has no need for such "control". But for an increasingly savage society it is required that the place become more and more like a prison just in order for it to continue to function at any level.

Always attempting to figure out the thinking processes of these people, I suppose they assume that, even while the mechanism for a Beast System stands well in existence, they merely have to be "on guard" against its falling into "the wrong hands". I promise you, the Beast was already on hand before any of today's super high-tech came along. He was there in Babylon and he was there in Rome. John's mention of what would sound like super high-tech in Revelation is intended to serve only as a MARKER as to what to look for when the time is imminent.

(Elsewhere I've insisted that the incident which took place in New York City on September 11th, 2001, was described in minute detail by John in Revelation as one more of these markers for the faithful and the astute to pay attention to in order to better know where things stood on the time scale. And that description of September 11th comes within TWO PAGES of the end of the book, the WHOLE book.)

The biggest marker, by far, the loudest, most commonly known of, most talked about, most quoted... and LEAST UNDERSTOOD... is John's riddle of "The Mark of the Beast", or "666". I recognized it as a riddle when I first sat down to read it carefully at that moment when I decided to validate - or debunk - the Bible for myself. I caught that he was telling the reader, "Now get this as it is of greatest importance." And I also caught right away that the answer to the riddle had to lay within the book itself, such was the way it was structured. But what a book!

I've heard my share of crack-brained explanations for "666". One is that John was referring to the Emperor Nero. Word has it that Nero was, indeed, a racial Jew, he certainly headed the Beast of that day and he was definitely massacring Christians in the arena, etc. They say that John was using this cryptic phrase to shield himself from persecution. He was already in exile on the Island of Patmos. But mainly this reference only came after John had laid out the entire next two thousand years of White history. No. This Beast was in the far-off future.

More nonsense I've heard in the form of some totally incomprehensible gibberish having to do with some "factor of nine", or the like. I wouldn't even mention this were it not for my having heard it more than once. Then there was the story - true or not - that somehow each of the then Soviet ICBMs bore on it somewhere "666". (Many were convinced that the Soviet Union was Gog and Magog. There is the fact that the Khazar Jews came out of southern Russia but Russia itself was their first victim and, indeed, most of these types are HERE now working their damage.)

Let's read the whole verse:

"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six." That is from Revelation, Chapter Thirteen, Verse Eighteen.

The language of the first lines. Emphasis upon wisdom and understanding. "Now get this if you are smart enough." Next, there is something for you to count. But what? If it were not to have been lost forever at the outset then it must be all contained there within the rest of the book. Furthermore, if you have read the book then you'll already have gone over it. But did you catch it? The Beast is clearly referred to. But then there is the possibly confusing part about "a man".

This has most people, by far, thrown. In Biblical usage, as one will already know if he has read the Old Testament, this kind of reference denotes two things: It does mean the living flesh; And it means not an individual but a group. A group of ONE TYPE of individual. And so people for a long time have been looking for this "Beast" to step up and announce himself. All out of misreading and misunderstanding.

Make no mistake, the Beast is a SYSTEM, a PHILOSOPHY and it is THOSE RUNNING IT. It is NOT a personality. Many who have served and furthered the Beast may fit a certain pattern for this but no one person has ever been or ever will be the Beast.

The number "666" is directly named. (And crazy people as yet imagine a flock of veritable zombies running around with "666" tattooed in the middle of their foreheads, etc.)

But NO ONE tackles the toughest business of all in this short verse: The business about COUNTING. Naturally, that would have to be the clincher.

In all honesty, one of the very things which turned me off of studying the Bible when I was young was its almost maddening use of repetition when it was trying to establish a critical point. This I saw later, after I had gained maturity. The matter of the importance of genealogy is emphasized in this way. Two other "tricks" I caught: Omission as in the case of the five-hundred-year gap in time between the end of the Old and the start of the New Testament. We were being told in very loud language that Israel as a people and as a race was GONE FROM THERE during this time and, therefore, there was nothing to record. Finally, anomaly.

Something weird and out of place. Done this way to get your attention. We all know how they "teach" the Bible these days. Hit and run, hit and miss. Everything from out of context. Today's little verse - one of countless many that either contains no meaning or might be interpreted countless different ways - is taken and expanded upon until the gathering is about to burst into tears out of sheer boredom. Try to imagine studying a textbook or even reading a novel in that way.

But try also to imagine reading along in a story, arriving over half way through the book, and now coming upon a main player, suddenly, without introduction or explanation of any kind. THAT is anomaly. And it, too, is done to get your attention as well as to serve as a marker.

"At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drave the Jews from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day." That is from Second Kings, Chapter Sixteen, Verse Six. That is over half way through the Old Testament and it is the FIRST TIME the word "Jews" appears anywhere. It is a marker.

On one occasion as I was at work on a book and attempting to explain and illustrate this matter of repetition within the Bible, I chose to demonstrate just how frequently God would list the tribes of the Canaanites and, in the same breath, curse them into the ground. So I went back to my annotations and commenced to count.

Genesis: 10; 15 through 20.

Genesis: 15; 18 through 21.

Exodus: 3; 8.

Exodus: 3; 17.

Exodus: 13; 5.

Exodus: 23; 23.

Exodus: 23; 28.

Exodus: 33; 2.

Exodus: 34; 11.

Numbers: 13; 29.

Deuteronomy: 7; 1.

Deuteronomy: 20; 17.

Joshua: 3; 10.

Joshua: 9; 1.

Joshua: 11; 3.

Joshua: 12; 8.

Joshua: 24; 11.

Judges: 3; 5.

That's eighteen listings. There will be no more until after Second Kings, Chapter Sixteen, Verse Six has been reached. And by that time we will have Jews. Of course, eighteen is factored by 666. You must read the surrounding verses to understand what God meant by all of this.

Satan's spawn living on earth. Now having taken over the Hebrew Temple and having ruined the ancient Israelite state. It would require the coming of Christ to undo this - at the cost of his life - and provide God's true people with another cycle of civilization before the End arrives, before these Jews could rise again and retake control over White affairs and White destiny.

(There is so much more to this Canaanite business than just "666". For example, the very final verse of Zechariah ends with these words: "Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and see the therein: and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of hosts."

Throughout, I've been working from the King James version of the Bible. It is most interesting to note that in subsequent translations the word "Jews" from Second Kings has been changed to "men of Judah" while "Canaanite" from Zechariah has been changed to "merchant". Clearly, by this, the meaning has been lost while it becomes obvious that someone out there also knows what I'm telling... but doesn't want it told.)

XIII

As Saint John said in his Gospel, "In the beginning was the Word." I've mentioned earlier that history itself is only about Whites because only Whites show development and, therefore, only they can have a destiny. There's line of thought which takes this even further and states that, without human (White) presence, all else is irrelevant. Like the old, "If a tree falls in the forest and there's no one around to hear it, does it make a noise?" (The answer, by the way, is: "No".)

The concept, then, of perfect creation. The Word, the thought. I said earlier that to wonder itself presupposes much. There was only What Was along with what needed to be. Living truth, truth in action. I no doubt should pause here and inject something I discovered at around the same time that I discovered the answer to the "666" riddle, etc. God's very name - Yahweh - translates to mean, "I Am That I Am". Naturally, I stretched this into, "There Only Is What There Is". The laws of nature and physics. One reality.

And then man took it own his own. He made something complex out of something simple. When he was done fighting for his existence and had established secure states and societies, he decided there were all sorts of "variables". Rather than a God he couldn't see or understand any longer, he carved statues of deities and assigned each one a special field. Toward the end of the line in Rome, they were worshipping the Emperor as "god". At the hard end of the line, the Praetorian Guard was auctioning off the seat of Emperor to the highest bidder.

People forget. It was the Etruscans who first founded Rome. The symbol of the wolf nursing Romulus and Remus is a very stark symbol that these Etruscans were a branch of the Israelite Tribe of Benjamin whose Biblical symbology is the ravening wolf. A thousand years later, when Rome - now having gone rotten and cosmopolitan - was sacked by the Vandals, or the Visigoths, it was Benjamin again, now in a new guise, back to claim his due. What he found there then, as Gibbon wrote in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire", was a mess of human garbage, not even "Roman" at all.

Saint Paul said something most important when he referred to the "gentiles" (the "Lost Sheep of the House of Israel" who were not citizens of Rome), i.e., the "barbarians" now scattered throughout Europe, having not heard the Law but yet carrying on in the way of the Law and thus being a "law unto themselves". Remember that God told Abraham that he would make of his people "kings and priests", that they would carry not only the law but the morality right within the genes of their blood. They would be and act as good Whites will do.

In Rome they had gone to hell. Out in the forests of northern Europe they were pristine. Dying Rome had gone Christian. But it was too late for them. The race itself was already shot. In northern Europe they were as yet pagan but the blood and the natural customs were absolutely solid. Even our teachers when I was in elementary school taught us about the Romans importing blond hair from the north to fashion into wigs because their own blonds were becoming more and more scarce. (Were they unable to figure out why?)

You could still see this conflict going on in Twentieth Century America in the struggle between Al Capone and Elliot Ness. Capone, nominally "Italian" but dark and swarthy, hardly "White" at all but probably a devout "Christian" and committed to vicious organized crime and corruption. Ness, the Scotsman who was the very picture of a high, White type and acting in the defence of what was still a White society and civilization. But he, too, undoubtedly was a practicing Christian. The "sins of the fathers" carrying over two thousand years later and on a separate continent with religion taking a distant back seat to race.

The Old Testament keeps referring to Whites, that is, the ancient Israelites, as those of "hard hearts, stiff necks and brows of solid brass". The New Testament refers to them as "children". Both are correct representations. A spoiled child is bad enough. But a spoiled adult?

No worries, only indulgences. No purpose, only diversions. And none are better able to involve themselves more deeply in this sort of thing than the wealthier classes. Revolt from below is practically built in. But there's not been anything very "noble" in any of these revolutions. It's just that these lower classes want their share of the indulgences and the diversions. Those that found themselves at the top of the heap only did so by virtue of their ancestors' nobility. They themselves had become unworthy. As Jefferson said of them, "They become all head and no body."

But, as I've said, with each such revolution comes a further weakening of the remaining structure of civilization itself. Somehow they confuse this structure with the rotten bastards who have come to rest upon it.

The introduction of the lie. A lie is like a vampire. It can't exist without a viable host for it is a negative. The lie had to be introduced. The lie represents confusion. But confusion of what? Of the truth, of course.

We've seen how things can naturally go to hell over the slow span of centuries once the White man has lost sight of his God and his purpose. Of course, the key thing here is the defilement and the destruction of the race itself, rendering any true revival impossible. But what of an identifiable group of people taking and adopting as their own agenda the very policies and processes that can take a comparatively healthy, White society and RUIN IT in crash-course, record time the way the Jews have done in the Twentieth Century and right into the present?

That is Satan at work.

The biggest lie of all is racial equality. That goes against God just as it goes against nature. Silly Whites sitting around their parlors and drawing rooms during the late Eighteen Hundreds and early Nineteen Hundreds, tired and bored, might be willing to entertain such insanity as this coming from Jews the likes of Franz Boas, etc. Long before the next century was out, these same Jews had extended their influence to control over the very institutions, the governments of the respective, White lands and were DICTATING policy.

The lie. Anything can be the way you want it. If you "believe" hard enough. If it seems "right" and "fair" to you. Life is for what you can squeeze out of it. The most "fun", the most "pleasure", the most possessions, etc. It's all down to property rights now and one person's money is as "green" as the next person's. Besides, your right to choose who you will deal with has been taken away. You may "choose" to be homosexual, or to pick a non-White partner. Or you may "choose" to abort an unborn child. But you CANNOT choose to keep your affairs strictly White. Delimitation, restraint - your right to DISCRIMINATE - has been taken away.

The Beast thus steps forward and identifies himself.

XIV

Something equally as crazy as the "factor of nine" explanation for John's "666" riddle is the insane idea that it had been the common use of lead plumbing in ancient Rome that caused its demise. Lead poisoning might have led to illness, even symptoms like "stupidity", etc. But it would not account for the disappearance of decent, White types. It seems as though they'll look any place except exactly where they should be looking.

Rome fell to pieces, pulled apart, collapsed from within. Its society died. There was nothing left except memories, a lot of great architecture, some rotted out institutions along with a rotted out ruling class. And, finally, a thoroughly ruined, polluted and destroyed population base. As King David had said over a thousand years before, "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

Those "barbarians" (so named by the Greeks on account of the unintelligibility of their language) who sacked Rome and eventually came to supplant it with the modern nations of Europe were the only thing responsible for a decent, modern Italy and the survival of civilization at all. They are ourselves.

Today, it has been argued, there are no great hordes of barbarians out there on the fringes, waiting to rush in when this current Beast finally dies. For this identical malady and this same iron grip includes all of the West and, since the fall of the Iron Curtain, the East as well. While some in the East are lamenting the quick loss of their own culture and community now, by far the most, and especially the young, are rushing to jump on the bandwagon of "freedom", "fun", "pleasure" and the inter-racial "joys" of cosmopolitanism.

Alongside "democracy", the greatest export of this place is quick, ready-made degeneration and decay in the form of a completely toxic "culture", if that even is the right term. Here it required a few generations to take hold and to mutate into the monster it is today. Over there, they are gobbling it up full strength.

So much for the theory that it would be from the East that the "new barbarians" would come to forcibly clean up the rotten and decadent West after its fall. There also, as I have mentioned, goes the idea of the Soviet Union (now gone) as being the present-day incarnation of the Biblical Gog and Magog. But thereby is clarified who, what and where the actual Beast is. And any amount of real clarity that can be had these days is worth anything and everything.

This essay isn't so much about Revelation as it is about the Beast and, moreover, what it has done to White society, indeed, any White society which succumbs to that kind of poison. But I must briefly mention the way in which John foresees this mess being resolved. (For the remainder, the traceable, historical progression from the time of John to the present day, I outlined that at some detail in the book entitled, "Revisiting Revelation".)

If, as I maintain, this is a DNA colonization from deep space; If the White race is God's own offspring; If every move ever made has already been foretold in the Bible; Then why doubt the stated outcome as also written? Alongside that - and unless that is to be the case - then any intelligent and objective person would have to concede there is no hope at all. Man will not redeem himself from this mess. But God said he would not allow Satan to win. He would not permit Satan to destroy his experiment.

Quoting Saint John, writing in Revelation of what he was shown of the distant future, at the appointed hour - unknown to all except God himself - there would come from space toward earth an artificial planet measuring fourteen hundred miles square. (About the size of the moon.) It is referred to as the "New Jerusalem". It is here where all the talk about "pearly gates", etc., springs from. John describes this incredibly huge space vehicle in minute detail.

Would it even be necessary to argue how something of this nature could brush aside all the combined might of the earthly Beast System? The experiment is culled. As Christ indicated, the wheat goes into the barn and the tares go into the fire. I personally think that the select will be resettled on an unspoiled earth in another dimension of time. And if we are to believe the promise, it will include the select from all other times. (For they are are still out there, with perhaps some yet to come, as real and solid as you and I are now, in separate time dimensions.)

But in the previous book about Revelation wherein I layed out the historical meaning and progression, I did not go into the effect upon human behavior itself once human societies had literally gone to hell following the loss of their awareness, their core and their purpose. That is the very consideration which prompted me to undertake this quick study of just that issue.

The skeptics look at the Bible - indeed most of history - and think it is all mythology, all strange people, in distant places, distant times, dressing funny, talking funny and acting funny. From what they know of the present-day Church and contact with these "Judeo-Christians", they sense it is all bullshit. I know I did and still do insofar as current misunderstanding and misrepresentation are concerned. But, as I wrote some place else, none of our institutions - religion included - could have started out as bullshit. Otherwise, we wouldn't be here today. However, this booklet is dedicated to showing how these same institutions can and do - in man's hands - devolve into bullshit.

These same skeptics, myself included at least as a very young person, also viewed most of society's own laws and rules as more of this same type of BS. I was impatient with it all. I wanted to go, go, go. To have it all and right now. I wanted no hindrance, no interference. It seemed all there for me to have and I was going to have it, one way or another. And, generally speaking, I did.

And yet, to my credit, it remained somehow within the solid context of what was White and Western. I hated the sight and the thought of "hippies". I was prone to violence at the sight or mention of race-mixing. The current "culture" disgusted and disinterested me. I was drawn like a magnet - or a sleepwalker - to Adolf Hitler by my fourteenth year. Only then did my education begin. Having long passed the half-century mark, the learning and the observation is only now really coming together, the pieces really starting to form a picture.

But then the Old Testament said it should be so with any growing and maturing individual. The problem nowadays seems to be that this no longer holds true. People seem to learn nothing. They hit a certain ceiling by the time they're in their late teens and then they merely get older. The present phenomenon of the "old hippies" is my point exactly. Merely old, not wise. I've said it before that I see my own generation as being the first in two thousand years to have broken with the traditions of their ancestors.

And I mentioned some place else of the story told to us as kids about Socrates complaining about the youth of his day in Classical Greece. Every symptom was present from our own day. And yet, these Liberal types would point out, Greece was "still there". Yes, a plot of land called Greece is still there. But it isn't Classical Greece. It stands barely outside of Third World classification due to its racial composition. Look at those ancient statues and then look at the person in the street. Socrates had recognized the crossroads then. The wrong turn obviously was made. (And Socrates was forced to drink poison.)

The music favored by each succeeding generation barely resembling that of the previous one is, to me, perhaps the best example of this fast-moving phenomenon. It is downhill, it is toward hell. It is lacking form and restraint. It is lacking even basic humanity. And, once again, to my own credit, I was instinctively drawn to the classics. What do they represent? The absolute height of Western culture. It is the very sound of a social order now having vanished. It's been all downhill since then. The culture was poisoned and killed over a century ago.

Or else it lost its direction. And only then could the real poison be injected in its place.

Back to the Bible and its strange laws. And, at the very same time, the laws as they stood on the books of most Western countries - the United States certainly included - as of mid-Twentieth Century. Weird and old-fashioned? Out-dated and out-moded? Repressive and even "Fascistic"? With only White, land-owning males holding the franchise. Adultery still was punishable by law. And "Sodomy"... to include homosexuality. And most certainly miscegenation... or the crossing of races. All that was on the U.S. books. And it certainly is part of the Old Testament.

It required a century to tear all that down. During that same century, American society went from magnificent to deplorable. It's not a coincidence. We can trace Jews boldly ripping away, subverting the foundations but we can also see the masses of Whites demanding more and more of it. Madness out of control. Like the old radio program, "Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men?" Well - besides "The Shadow" - at least the Biblical Patriarchs knew as well as did our own Founding Fathers. And it all stood for a long time and did marvellously well. Then it jumped the track, got lost and died.

Sometimes anecdotes are good. I remember the story one uncle of mine told of the wedding night of him and my aunt who was still a teenager at the time. They were driving a Ford Model "A" which had window blinds in it that would draw up and down. For safety's sake, my uncle had rolled up the marriage certificate in one of the rear blinds. When stopping at a motel for the night, the desk clerk demanded to see the certificate. They had to think hard to recall what they had done with it in order to secure lodging for the night. Such a thing could hardly happen today.

Then the day not long past when someone ditched a stolen car down our alley. Two of us went to investigate and found the thing hung up on a steel post, engine still running, doors wide open and the radio blaring "rap" music. My companion commented on the disgusting sounds and I replied, "What did you expect, Mozart?"

XV

Things might have been, admittedly, pretty bad in times past with regard to the existence of the individual. One of the little blurbs they'd like to impart to us kids in elementary school about life in the Middle Ages was that the average person never travelled more than thirty miles from where they were born. A lot of mud huts, darkness, cold and filth. A lot of violence, "cabin fever" - or plain madness, a lot of infant mortality. Most today couldn't tolerate the thought of any of that much less live it for more than five minutes.

But live it we did for century after century. And White, Western, Christian Civilization only grew stronger during that same period. One thing for sure: The individual was TOUGH. They say that if the small pox didn't kill you, it was sure to scar you. Bathing was a rarity, some say, for religious reasoning. As late as 1950, half the people in England had no teeth. If they did, they were either yellow or brown. Men coming home drunk after work and "putting the boots" to their wife or kids was commonplace. Illiteracy was rife. And yet we grew stronger.

As I said earlier, it was only my own generation, the Post War "Baby Boomers", that really separated from this. And our parents were only to happy to hand it to us, recalling as they did some pretty meager and terrible times of their own during the Great Depression. I know I was spoiled to no end. (But I suppose, by virtue of what I've been doing with my life ever since, I was an exception and can take all that pampering as STIMULI for my imagination and intellect.)

My father, especially, could relate tales from out of his own childhood that might have come from the Middle Ages. And he was, inwardly and outwardly, a man of iron. I owe him much eventhough he didn't have a mean bone in his body. His instincts were right on and he always called things for exactly what they were. A combat veteran of World War Two in the Pacific, he finally came around to what my National Socialist philosophy was really all about.

These days especially, one hears talk about the Great Depression. The fact that it was deliberately, artificially triggered in order to "redistribute wealth" is beside the point. They are saying now that it was the biggest crisis this country had faced since the Civil War and they probably are right. One can easily cite the critical differences between then and now by pointing out that this country was mainly White, most of the population was on the farm, most were law-abiding... but greatest of all, there still remained strong WHITE COMMUNITY. We still had each other.

I remember never locking our doors - even when gone on a road trip for days - until 1967. And 1967 was the same year that long hair, dope and fraternization with coloreds first entered the picture in my home town. I remember a favorite fun place to go, "Ater's Lake". Old "Loppy" Ater wouldn't let a colored on the place. After his death about 1970, his sons opened it wide up. Soon it was closed down permanently due to the influx and influence of coloreds and dopers. I remember when the local public swimming pools were first integrated in the mid-Sixties, my father made the decision to install our own, private swimming pool.

I remember at school, especially, that if you got into a fight with one of the Blacks, you got into a fight with all of them. I remember that, for the most part, in each of our classes, they were bigger and more mature, partly by virtue of their already having been held back a year or two because of their academic failing but mainly because they simply were more primitive and matured faster (but stopped sooner.) I've commented elsewhere that they amused me. Here was an introduction to early immorality but I was tickled by it.

They were, of course, confined then to the poorer end of town, the South Side. This somehow fascinated me. Yet they seemed happy and I instinctively saw that they shared community. I'll never forget the home made sign one of them attached to a telephone pole at the head of one alley reading, "Easy Street". I think "Easy Street" beckoned louder to me than the wasp nest world the other White students were preparing themselves for. But there never was any confusion over who was who and what was what.

That old German folk song that sings of "the land of song and loving" dating from approximately the time of the Napoleonic Wars really seems to tie it up.

The community was shot. I felt it. I left school, left home, left Ohio, and went to Party headquarters to start my life. I was a sixteen-year-old kid. But why not? The rest might have gone on to college to be utterly ruined by Marxist professors. Not me. I can't even say that if I could do it all over again, I would except sooner. I couldn't have done it any sooner.

As far as I'm concerned, it all adds up to proof that it is not the individual that matters in the end, it is the NATION, the COMMUNITY. Take care of the nation and out of it will come the natural geniuses, the natural leaders to take the masses on to increased greatness. Neglect the nation, let the broad masses degenerate into mere "niggers" and there is no more chance at greatness, nothing left that is worthwhile. And all of this within the context of comparative "ease" and "luxury".

Miserability, perhaps. But then there was duty, also. Then, too, there were the social constraints. You just didn't want to wind up on the wrong side of the tracks due to something like "moral turpitude" or the like. Today, the model seems really to be a pair of lesbians adopting a Chinese infant. It really doesn't get any deader or worse off than that. That represents the END OF THE ROAD for any society and any people that is weak enough, sick enough to entertain it. At the roughest, meanest of times in the past, at least the birth rate was kept pure and strong. And there was WHITE COMMUNITY.

Tough, boring. So it may have been from the fall of Rome to the end of the Second World War for the broad masses of Whites. (Don't forget that it still is for the colored world.) The vitality and the will to survive were dominate.

Children were an absolute necessity if the farm was to go on once you became too aged to work it. And if you were going to beat infant mortality, there had to be lots of children. These people had, if anything, a VITALITY that is missing today. Plenty of sex, you can be sure. But never sex "for the hell of it" as today. So-called "birth control" was seen as a gross immorality until very recently, until the tyranny of the individual took over. (And, believe me, the coloreds still don't give a damn about that.)

Some of the oldest, Aryan Indian wisdom states that "God gave the world to the Aryans", i.e. the lordly or noble ones. In short, the Whites. The Bible states the same thing. The Aryan Indian wisdom goes on to state that the corruption of women leads to the fall of the race and the civilization. What does the myth of Adam and Eve state? The woman is an easier target than the man. That's where Satan strikes. Seduction, not just sexually but in every other way possible. Since women got the vote early in the Twentieth Century, the slide into hell has become a virtual carnival ride downhill.

What higher aspiration could a healthy female have than the creation and nurturing of the on-coming next generation? What more noble calling or ideal? This instinct was beginning to falter even during the first half of the Twentieth Century and the respective Fascist governments in Europe placed the highest emphasis on reviving and safeguarding it with cash incentives and even awards of merit.

What has this been replaced with? I once sat in on the murder trial of a jail-house friend of mine who was accused of strangling his girl friend. The prosecution did an astoundingly thorough job of calling in this fellow's past girl friends from literally around the country to testify against him. (In Rome a female couldn't testify as that called for one placing one's hand over his testicles before swearing to tell the truth.) One of these very literal bitches stated that she had felt it was time for some "self-actualization" and broke off the relationship. That the fellow next tried to strangle her is beside the point.

Any damned, foolish, disgusting thing now goes and it goes according to law. Therefore, the law has turned against the people. The tyranny of the individual. The tyranny of "freedom". Previously, if you weren't idealistic enough to do it for the race, you did it instead for the sake of survival. And if you weren't any longer bound to do it for survival, then you did it because the rules of society demanded it of you. Now, if it doesn't suit your whim or liking, you don't have to do it at all.

No purpose, no constraint. And human nature being what it is, it comes basically down to: FUCK YOU!

Then add coloreds into the mix...

XVI

One would surely think there could be a happy medium between life governed by harsh brutality and a life gone to hell through leisure and luxury. In a very real sense, it might appear as though that time comprised the late Nineteenth and early Twentieth Centuries. As I've mentioned, it represented a crossroads. And the wrong road was taken ultimately by the West.

There was a conscious fight for the issue. Our side lost because we didn't think in terms of an "organism" as did the invading and burrowing Jews. And also, because of our nature, we couldn't see it in others that they might even be capable of monopolizing society's sensitive positions in order to use our own institutions against us. When some nations managed to awaken and free themselves from this invading influence, too many of the rest had succumbed to it and went foolishly off to war to destroy the Jews' opposition for them.

And ever since that time, the bill for that folly and that betrayal, together with its ever compounding interest has had to be paid.

From attacking the societies of others and eliminating their own governments - to be replaced by hand-picked sell-outs chosen from over here - it went to attacking AMERICAN society using ITS OWN institutions. Racial integration. Pollution of the popular culture. The uprooting of social customs and values. And there was a fight here as well. But again the Jews already held the sensitive posts along with the opinion-forming media. Police, etc., did what they were told. It was downhill all the way until, basically, the light flickered out.

And what was it all accomplished in the name of other than "freedom" and "liberty"? "Freedom" for Blacks to invade White society. No freedom for Whites to defend themselves. "Freedom" for any kind of trash or social disease to safely raise its head in the open. But no freedom for decent Whites to put their foot down against it. "Freedom" for things to pull apart and go crazy, in essence. But no freedom for concerned Whites to even try to hold it together.

To try to resist any of this can get you sentenced to a long term in prison for "violating" someone's so-called "civil rights". To be attached to any such cause can cost you your livelihood, can cost you your good name, can cost you your family. (And when I read Saint Paul stating that men of his calling should not marry, I knew instantly what he was talking about: Certainly not the "dirtiness" of having sex! No. It was rather that to be in our business and to attempt to have a family is only to invite heartbreak and tragedy. The enemy will instinctively strike at a man's family.)

Once more, as Paul said, "Because I tell you the truth I now become your enemy?"

That's where it was two thousand years ago and that's where it has returned to. Human nature and Conditioned Reflex 101 explains it. Of course, to recognize that there is a vicious dictatorial tyranny of a certain, false and alien philosophy in charge over everything takes care of the rest. "Tolerance" for any kind of poison or disgrace. But no tolerance for any kind of opposition to itself.

Real freedom is to BE and to DEVELOP as what you ARE. This present-day perversion of freedom really means the conscious overthrow of the Godly and natural order. The core and the foundation of that is, first, RACE, and then, second, the COMMUNITY consisting of the family, the tribe and finally the nation. As soon as these Jews in our midst felt secure with their influence behind the scenes in politics, banking, education and the media, they went right to work on attacking RACE. (Remember this is why they murdered Christ: He was reestablishing the core truth of race within the religion of Moses, thus threatening their scam and their monopoly.)

But as long as Whites nominally held together as a community just out of decent, common sense and natural good instinct, the Jews couldn't be satisfied. Their time-table was red-lined. Turn the culture alien and rip out all the societal underpinnings and then the old "time & proximity" with alien races will do the rest. And it has. This hasn't been by accident because, as I have said, there was a fight and we can easily identify those on the opposing side.

Those so-called "persecutions" of Jews in Europe during the Thirties and Forties were because of one thing: Those people had lived through and witnessed with their own eyes armies and masses of racial Jews first tearing away their social order that had stood in existence for a thousand years and then replacing it with either naked Communist dictatorships or what they liked to refer to as "Social Democratic" parties by which they could maintain a "managed confusion" until these same Communist movements could get their second wind and try again.

In the greater part of the West, the Jews didn't have the numbers to do this and so they had to do it using subtlety. One wouldn't necessarily compare a thing like the creation of the Federal Reserve System over here to the Russian Revolution over there. Or, for that matter, the coming of Roosevelt's "New Deal" as the coming of Marxist Socialism to the United States.

The Jews and their accomplices have been winning all the battles, with but minor and very transitory set-backs. This earthly "victory" is theirs. This victory of Satan is theirs. Man is fooled but God and nature are not. "Worshipping the Beast", indeed! Why not, "Laying down before the Beast"?

The removal of the very core, the key to everything: Race. And then the introduction of the clever, glittering lie: Freedom. They are enamored of words like "choices", etc. Choices of what? Means of confusing the real issue, means of diverting yourself from what is essential. You may choose to do anything if it is meaningless or self-destructive. These lost and hopeless "Judeo-Christians" look at lines from the Old Testament like "turn earnestly back to the Lord", etc.

But they haven't the slightest concept of what the Lord is or represents. If they were to turn to ADOLF HITLER, then they would be back in line with the Lord. You know the approximate chances of that.

Why does the Bible call the Day of the Lord "dark and terrible" after all?

XVII

Down now to a mass of individuals. The only thing really flowering anymore is technology. And apart from making possible the control of the many by the few, these incredible leaps and bounds of science have primarily, as far as I'm concerned, made it possible for us to really see and know what our own beginnings were. Our own advanced science has at least managed to remove the blinders from religion.

But, alas, not insofar as the critical matter of race is involved. Can't they yet see that it is only the Whites who have the capacity for this kind of discovery and development? I guess not. So it was also with the priests of Egypt before the lights went out on them, too, and taking also the last light of that remnant of Atlantean civilization. What did the legend say of Atlantis? That their science outran their morality?

As the community diminished, the tyranny grew. It could happen in no other way. A healthy community wouldn't need or tolerate any such tyranny. That's really what prison itself is all about: If you can't control yourself, there is an artificial environment custom made just for you (and the growing millions like you.) Prison today is the proving ground for what next will appear outside, within the society at large. Don't forget that to go colored is to go Third World. And you may study the nature of the Third World at your leisure should you doubt me.

Dictatorship? They point to Adolf Hitler anytime this subject is brought up. As I said earlier, Europe's house was on fire with the First World War and its aftermath. Hesitation or weakness at that time had only the result of Communist takeover. And that meant JEWISH DICTATORSHIP and mass slaughter of the people of the respective lands. Better your own "dictator" to defend hearth and home from alien desecration. Besides, it's really a bad misnomer to consider anyone who reflects the will of 99% of the nation as any kind of "dictator". Rather a CHAMPION, I should think.

Recall that nature and reality had formerly dictated what was going to be what. And should man ever be really free of this Beast tyranny, it would seem as though that will once again become the old, familiar guide with regard to what goes and what doesn't go. All the Liberalism and the stupid, poisonous CRAP will be right out the window. This civilization will be gone. The fancy gadgets won't work without electricity. If you can't see a sudden, dramatic return of mass illiteracy hovering right now, then you are practically blind.

But, if by this or any other upheaval - social, natural, extraterrestrial or whatever - the Beast System can be broken along with its death spell over the White people, then it will be a good thing. If it brings another great sorting out of peoples, then I'm all in favor, regardless the cost. Free of poisonous influence, alien domination, the presence of coloreds in our midst and a new beginning would be like a breath of fresh, springtime air. It's happened before.

In the meantime we have the individual. And what a prize package to be sure.

Insanity has been described as doing the same thing over and over while expecting a different result. All these unquestionable White "IQ"s out there and they only go to make possible the continuance of this monster which is systematically destroying the people. Again, no real knowledge, no real purpose and no real direction. They keep believing the same lies. They keep returning to the polls to vote for the same liars. They keep getting the same results. The real fabric wears thinner and thinner. And they never wake up.

They believe that "freedom", so-called, means their ability to be and do any damned, stupid, flaming, useless, self-destructive thing they want. What this kind of "freedom" really permits is wallowing and suffering in endless circles of misery and hopelessness to be made victims of, to be governed by superstition.

Free to become a prey. Freedom for the predators to roam at will.

What this falsification of freedom really provides for includes sacrificing their young (even before birth), their "choice" not to conceive a next generation in the first place, or their "choice" to pair off with some colored UNTERMENSCH thus not only cancelling themselves out but bringing in a new alien line, or to adopt some alien offspring again cancelling themselves out while further polluting the genetic environment, or by dedicating the fruits of their labor to subsidizing more colored aliens either here or off in the Third World, to be governed by aliens, to be awash in an alien "culture", and to be LOST in an alien belief system.

What's the present-day ideal? I well know what these "Judeo-Christians" want: Peace, love, brotherhood, tolerance, etc. That's not Christianity. That's HINDUISM. And go and have a look at what Hinduism does for the masses as well as what kind of masses accept a creed like Hinduism. When they say it, it means they want what we've got or created or what we ARE. When Whites say it, it is nothing more or less than a DEATH WISH. To be absorbed into the colored bio-mass. To be erased. To disappear.

Individuals don't count. Only the BREED. And to protect and expand this breed, Whites formed COMMUNITIES which themselves formed into NATIONS. Satan hated God's highest work - the Aryans - and has been dedicated to destroying it. Read the next several verses following Eve's seduction in the Garden of Eden and you won't have a doubt left as to what the reference is really about.

Remove race as the core, the very nucleus of the atom, and spread the lie that man can have it any way he chooses. Then take no chances by assuming every decision-making and opinion-making spot for himself. As I've repeated, time and proximity will do the rest. The very social structures that Whites had built up for themselves will rot and fall to pieces. And their ersatz "citizens" - former slaves and colored immigrants - they will then mingle with thus extinguishing a brilliant civilization and extending the Third World over North America.

Make no mistake, this is a PLAN and it is guided by a TYRANNY. It is not an error, it is deliberate. But these masses of individuals - all cut loose from race, nation, community and even family - won't have it any other way. As the Bible states, toward the end, they will kill anyone opposing this and be convinced they are serving the Lord. They are thus duped and by their own worst enemy. And in this they actually FORFEIT any right to so-called "freedom". They have proved that they can't handle it.

I've repeated that to wonder presupposes much. What it presupposes is a certain CAPACITY. Haven't you ever wondered about these types who never seem to learn, to wake up, to respond appropriately? And I'm referring to the masses of the White race itself.

These masses haven't the capacity to wonder, to ask questions. That is why there was a natural elite meant to govern. And I do not mean these crooks and these scum in charge of things at present.

As Hitler said, the masses are feminine. They are what "democracy" caters to and they haven't the horizons to even begin to comprehend where it will lead them. It is nothing short of the REVERSAL of the Godly or natural intent, the very reversal of evolution and development. And I maintain that nobody and nothing has the "freedom" or the "right" to do this... even to themselves.

What are the hallmarks of this Cult of the Individual?

Self-interest, of course. The statistic on marriage for a long time has been that more than half of them don't make it. Why not? Simply because it has been undertaken for generations now purely for the sake of self-gratification. The minute the self-interest is gone - or the "novelty" wears off - it is conveniently terminated. Why, they've even trash-canned the former, old marriage vows to accommodate this. To go further, marriage between races and homosexual marriage renders the whole institution as a MOCKERY.

I began with a brief discussion of juvenile "gangs", delinquency, etc. And I outlined that this phenomenon comes as a result of

ALIENATION or the sense of no belonging. (Or, perhaps better put, of not wanting to belong to something ALIEN.)

Human sexuality itself. Here again, procreation of the race is a dirty terminology. It now all goes to the immediate satisfaction of animal lust. With no responsibility attached (unless it is to guard yourself from some dread disease sent by God to try to impart a message.) Again, miscegenation and homosexuality are protected by law. It is thus ENTHRONED.

In ancient Israel, they had fallen so low as to sacrifice their infants to the Canaanite god, Moloch. Sacrificing the unborn to the Jewish-Canaanite god of "Freedom" is no different. Though some still squabble, this too is protected by law and, therefore, ENTHRONED.

Religion is "of your choice". No truth, only self-serving self-satisfaction. And they, in any event, all say the same thing when it comes down to RACE. No. To them it is all "personality", all "belief", all "hereafter". They number in the tens of millions and have budgets in the billions. And still things assume more the overall appearance of a LIVING HELL with each passing year.

Art and culture. Music, literature, painting, sculpture even as of a century ago have more and more began to resemble nothing, to be "interpretive", to be "anything you want to see in them". In reality, they are nothing but abomination. Nothing but more confusion. Something that might pass for anything, assuredly, represents NOTHING. A people's culture reflects the state of its common SOUL. Take a look and a listen to this mess today. Straight out of HELL!

Leadership. So-called "democracy" literally defines as catering to the lowest common denominator within a mass of people. Numbers. A media monopoly coupled with an ever-growing colored segment - not to mention both "parties" owned and operated by Jews - and, again, one more institution rendered as nothing more than a mockery.

Education. I've already stated that we stand at the precipice of mass illiteracy. It hasn't been a question of "education" now for a very long time but, instead, one of CONDITIONING. Spoil them and ruin them at the very outset of their lives through contact with coloreds, alien concepts, unnatural surroundings, etc. Make them all set for existence as some interchangeable part in an UNHUMAN environment. Render them fit only as interchangeable cogs within the Beast System.

In his masterwork, "Mein Kampf", Adolf Hitler posed and then answered, "What is life? Life is the nation." Removal of the notion of REALITY - which is RACE - coupled with an insane, perverted notion of "freedom", all guided and instrumented by Jews, and this nation is destroyed.

They hate Hitler now as they hated Jesus Christ then. One may study the men themselves but it is equally important to know and understand the TIME and the PLACE where they respectively arose. Pivotal crossroads for the entire White race. And Saint Paul would definitely want to throw in: KNOW THE ENEMY because he has been the same all along.

The concept of service to the nation creates a mass of better individuals. The concept of service to the individual creates a conglomeration of defectives.

It's been observed that a people will ultimately come to resemble their actual rulers. Here that has been proven. Looking strictly at what as yet remain as nominally "White", they possess the spirit of Jews. More and more, as they mix and defile their bodies and their very blood, they'll come also to LOOK LIKE Jews.

Take everything away from Higher Creation, that is, the White race, and what takes over apart from pure animal instinct? Worse, animal instinct that now can use human intelligence to meet its own, savage whims? This describes a monstrosity. This describes Satan and it describes Jews, his offspring.

How could the Beast System be anything other than a system over beasts?

I've said that a planet devoid of human, Godlike existence is an irrelevancy. I conclude by saying that an individual or a society devoid of purpose and awareness, separated from their community, are likewise an irrelevancy.

Both will be dealt with as such by nature and by God.

KHAZARS (known also as Chozars, as Ἀκάρζιροι or Χάζαροι in Byzantine writers, as Khazirs in Armenian and Khwalisses in Russian chronicles, and Ugri Bieli in Nestor), an ancient people who occupied a prominent place amongst the secondary powers of the Byzantine state-system. In the epic of Firdousi Khazar is the representative name for all the northern foes of Persia, and legendary invasions long before the Christian era are vaguely attributed to them. But the Khazars are an historic figure upon the borderland of Europe and Asia for at least 900 years (A.D. 190-1100). The epoch of their greatness is from A.D. 600 to 950. Their home was in the spurs of the Caucasus and along the shores of the Caspian—called by medieval Moslem geographers Bahr-al-Khazar (“sea of the Khazars”); their cities, all populous and civilized commercial centres, were Itil, the capital, upon the delta of the Volga, the “river of the Khazars,” Semender (Tarkhu), the older capital, Khamlidje or Khalendsch, Belendscher, the outpost towards Armenia, and Sarkel on the Don. They were the Venetians of the Caspian and the Euxine, the organizers of the transit between the two basins, the universal carriers between East and West; and Itil was the meeting-place of the commerce of Persia, Byzantium, Armenia, Russia and the Bulgarians of the middle Volga. The tide of their dominion ebbed and flowed repeatedly, but the normal Khazari may be taken as the territory between the Caucasus, the Volga and the Don, with the outlying province of the Crimea, or Little Khazaria. The southern boundary never greatly altered; it did at times reach the Kur and the Aras, but on that side the Khazars were confronted by Byzantium and Persia, and were for the most part restrained within the passes of the Caucasus by the fortifications of Dariel. Amongst the nomadic Ugrians and agricultural Slavs of the north their frontier fluctuated widely, and in its zenith Khazaria extended from the Dnieper to Bolgari upon the middle Volga, and along the eastern shore of the Caspian to Astarabad.

Ethnology.—The origin of the Khazars has been much disputed, and they have been variously regarded as akin to the Georgians, Finno-Ugrians and Turks. This last view is perhaps the most probable. Their king Joseph, in answer to the inquiry of Ḥasdai Ibn Shaprūt of Cordova (c. 958), stated that his people sprang from Thogarmah, grandson of Japhet, and the supposed ancestor of the other peoples of the Caucasus. The Arab geographers who knew the Khazars best connect them either with the Georgians (Ibn Athīr) or with the Armenians (Dimishqi, ed. Mehren, p. 263); whilst Ahmad ibn Faḍlān, who passed through Khazaria on a mission from the caliph Moqtadir (A.D. 921), positively asserts that the Khazar tongue differed not only from the Turkish, but from that of the bordering nations, which were Ugrian.

Nevertheless there are many points connected with the Khazars which indicate a close connexion with Ugrian or Turkish peoples. The official titles recorded by Ibn Faḍlān are those in use amongst the Tatar nations of that age, whether Huns, Bulgarians, Turks or Mongols. The names of their cities can be explained only by reference to Turkish or Ugrian dialects (Klaproth, Mém. sur les Khazars; Howorth, Khazars). Some too amongst the medieval authorities (Ibn Hauqal and Işhakri) note a resemblance between the speech in use amongst the Khazars and the Bulgarians; and the modern Magyar—a Ugrian language—can be traced back to a tribe which in the 9th century formed part of the Khazar kingdom. These characteristics, however, are accounted for by the fact that the Khazars were at one time subject to the Huns (A.D. 448 et seq.), at another to the Turks (c. 580), which would sufficiently explain the signs of Tatar influence in their polity, and also by the testimony of all observers. Greeks, Arabs and Russians, that there was a double strain within the Khazar nation. There were Khazars and Kara (black) Khazars. The Khazars were fair-skinned, black-haired and of a remarkable beauty and stature; their women indeed were sought as wives equally at Byzantium and Bagdad; while the Kara Khazars were ugly, short, and were reported by the Arabs almost as dark as Indians. The latter were indubitably the Ugrian nomads of the steppe, akin to the Tatar invaders of Europe, who filled the armies and convoyed the caravans of the ruling caste. But the Khazars proper were a civic commercial people, the founders of cities, remarkable for somewhat elaborate political institutions, for persistence and for good faith—all qualities foreign to the Hunnic character.

They have been identified with the Ἀκάρινοι (perhaps Ak-Khazari, or White Khazars) who appear upon the lower Volga in the Byzantine annals, and thence they have been deduced, though with less convincing proof, either from the Ἀγάθυροι (Agathyrri) or the Καριαροι of Herodotus, iv. 104. There was throughout historic times a close connexion which eventually amounted to political identity between the Khazars and the Barsileens (the Passils of Moses of Chorene) who occupied the delta of the Volga; and the Barsileens can be traced through the pages of Ptolemy (Geog. v. 9), of Pliny (iv. 26), of Strabo (vii. 306), and of Pomponius Mela (ii. c. 1, p. 119) to the so-called Royal Scythians, Σκίθαι βασιλῆες, who were known to the Greek colonies upon the Euxine, and whose political superiority and commercial enterprise led to this rendering of their name. Such points, however, need not here be further pursued than to establish the presence of this white race around the Caspian and the Euxine throughout historic times. They appear in European history as White Huns (Ephthalites), White Ugrians (Sar-ogours), White Bulgarians. Owing to climatic causes the tract they occupied was slowly drying up. They were the outposts of civilization towards the encroaching desert, and the Tatar nomadism that advanced with it. They held in precarious subjection the hordes whom the conditions of the climate and the soil made it impossible to supplant. They bore the brunt of each of the great waves of Tatar conquests, and were eventually overwhelmed.

History.—Amidst this white race of the steppe the Khazars can be first historically distinguished at the end of the 2nd century A.D. They burst into Armenia with the Barsileens, A.D. 198. They were repulsed and attacked in turn. The pressure of the nomads of the steppe, the quest of plunder or revenge, these seem the only motives of these early expeditions; but in the long struggle between the Roman and Persian empires, of which Armenia was often the battlefield, and eventually the prize, the attitude of the Khazars assumed political importance. Armenia inclined to the civilization and ere long to the Christianity of Rome, whilst her Arsacid princes maintained an inveterate feud with the Sassanids of Persia. It became therefore the policy of the Persian kings to call in the Khazars in every collision with the empire (200-350). During the 4th century however, the growing power of Persia culminated in the annexation of eastern Armenia. The Khazars, endangered by so powerful a neighbour, passed from under Persian influence into that remote alliance with Byzantium which thenceforth characterized their policy, and they aided Julian in his invasion of Persia (363). Simultaneously with the approach of Persia to the Caucasus the terrible empire of the Huns sprang up among the Ugrians of the northern steppes. The Khazars, straitened on every side, remained passive till the danger culminated in the accession of Attila (434). The emperor Theodosius sent envoys to bribe the Khazars ('Ἀκάρζιροι) to divert the Huns from the empire by an attack upon their flank. But there was a Hunnic party amongst the Khazar chiefs. The design was betrayed to Attila; and he extinguished the independence of the nation in a moment. Khazaria became the apanage of his eldest son, and the centre of government amongst the eastern subjects of the Hun (448). Even the iron rule of Attila was preferable to the time of anarchy that succeeded it. Upon his death (454) the wild immigration which he had arrested revived. The Khazars and the Sarogours (i.e. White Ogors, possibly the Barsileens of the Volga delta) were swept along in a flood of mixed Tatar peoples which the conquests of the Avars had set in motion. The Khazars and their companions broke through the Persian defences of the Caucasus. They appropriated the territory up to the Kur and the Aras, and roamed at large through Iberia, Georgia and Armenia. The Persian king implored the emperor Leo I. to help him defend Asia Minor at the Caucasus (457), but Rome was herself too hard pressed, nor was it for fifty years that the Khazars were driven back and the pass of Derbent fortified against them (c. 507).

Throughout the 6th century Khazaria was the mere highway for the wild hordes to whom the Huns had opened the passage into Europe, and the Khazars took refuge (like the Venetians from Attila) amongst the seventy mouths of the Volga. The pressure of the Turks in Asia precipitated the Avars upon the West. The conquering Turks followed in their footsteps (560-580). They beat down all opposition, wrested even Bosphorus in the Crimea from the empire, and by the annihilation of the Ephthalites completed the ruin of the White Race of the plains from the Oxus to the Don. The empires of Turks and Avars, however, ran swiftly their barbaric course, and the Khazars arose out of the chaos to more than their ancient renown. They issued from the land of Barsilia, and extended their rule over the Bulgarian hordes left masterless by the Turks, compelling the more stubborn to migrate to the Danube (641). The agricultural Slavs of the Dnieper and the Oka were reduced to tribute, and before the end of the 7th century the Khazars had annexed the Crimea, had won complete command of the Sea of Azov, and, seizing upon the narrow neck which separates the Volga from the Don, had organized the portage which has continued since an important link in the traffic between Asia and Europe. The alliance with Byzantium was revived. Simultaneously, and no doubt in concert, with the Byzantine campaign against Persia (589), the Khazars had reappeared in Armenia, though it was not till 625 that they appear as Khazars in the Byzantine annals. They are then described as "Turks from the East," a powerful nation which held the coasts of the Caspian and the Euxine, and took tribute of the Viatitsh, the Severians and the Polyane. The khakan, enticed by the promise of an imperial princess, furnished Heraclius with 40,000 men for his Persian war, who shared in the victory over Chosroes at Nineveh.

Meanwhile the Moslem empire had arisen. The Persian empire was struck down (637), and the Moslems poured into Armenia. The khakan, who had defied the summons sent him by the invaders, now aided the Byzantine patrician in the defence of Armenia. The allies were defeated, and the Moslems undertook the subjugation of Khazaria (651). Eighty years of warfare followed, but in the end the Moslems prevailed. The khakan and his chieftains were captured and compelled to embrace Islam (737), and till the decay of the Mahommedan empire Khazaria with all the other countries of the Caucasus paid an annual tribute of children and of corn (737-861). Nevertheless, though overpowered in the end, the Khazars had protected the plains of Europe from the Mahommedans, and made the Caucasus the limit of their conquests.

In the interval between the decline of the Mahommedan empire and the rise of Russia the Khazars reached the zenith of their power. The merchants of Byzantium, Armenia and Bagdad met in the markets of Itil (whither since the raids of the Mahommedans the capital had been transferred from Semender), and traded for the wax, furs, leather and honey that came down the Volga. So important was this traffic held at Constantinople that, when the portage to the Don was endangered by the irruption of a fresh horde of Turks (the Petchenegs), the emperor Theophilus himself despatched the materials and the workmen to build for the Khazars a fortress impregnable to their forays (834). Famous as the one stone structure is in that stoneless region, the post became known far and wide amongst the hordes of the steppe as Sar-kel or the White Abode. Merchants from every nation found protection and good faith in the Khazar cities. The Jews, expelled from Constantinople, sought a home amongst them, developed the Khazar trade, and contended with Mahommedans and Christians for the theological allegiance of the Pagan people. The dynasty accepted Judaism (c. 740), but there was equal tolerance for all, and each man was held amenable to the authorized code and to the official judges of his own faith. At the Byzantine court the khakan was held in high honour. The emperor Justinian Rhinotmetus took refuge with him during his exile and married his daughter (702). Justinian's rival Vardanes in turn sought an asylum in Khazaria, and in Leo IV. (775) the grandson of a Khazar sovereign ascended the Byzantine throne. Khazar troops were amongst the bodyguard of the imperial court; they fought for Leo VI. against Simeon of Bulgaria; and the khakan was honoured in diplomatic intercourse with the seal of three solidi, which marked him as a potentate of the first rank, above even the pope and the Carolingian monarchs. Indeed his dominion became an object of uneasiness to the jealous statecraft of Byzantium, and Constantine Porphyrogenitus, writing for his son's instruction in the government, carefully enumerates the Alans, the Petchenegs, the Uzes and the Bulgarians as the forces he must rely on to restrain it.

It was, however, from a power that Constantine did not consider that the overthrow of the Khazars came. The arrival of the Varangians amidst the scattered Slavs (862) had united them into a nation. The advance of the Petchenegs from the East gave the Russians their opportunity. Before the onset of those fierce invaders the precarious suzerainty of the khakan broke up. By calling in the Uzes, the Khazars did indeed dislodge the Petchenegs from the position they had seized in the heart of the kingdom between the Volga and the Don, but only to drive them inwards to the Dnieper.

The Hungarians, severed from their kindred and their rulers, migrated to the Carpathians, whilst Oleg, the Russ prince of Kiev, passed through the Slav tribes of the Dnieper basin with the cry "Pay nothing to the Khazars" (884). The kingdom dwindled rapidly to its ancient limits between the Caucasus, the Volga and the Don, whilst the Russian traders of Novgorod and Kiev supplanted the Khazars as the carriers between Constantinople and the North. When Ibn Faḍlān visited Khazaria forty years later, Itil was even yet a great city, with baths and market-places and thirty mosques. But there was no domestic product nor manufacture; the kingdom depended solely upon the now precarious transit dues, and administration was in the hands of a major domus also called khakan. At the assault of Swiatoslav of Kiev the rotten fabric crumbled into dust. His troops were equally at home on land and water. Sarkel, Itil and Semender surrendered to him (965-969). He pushed his conquests to the Caucasus, and established Russian colonies upon the Sea of Azov. The principality of Tmutarakan, founded by his grandson Mstislav (988), replaced the kingdom of Khazaria, the last trace of which was extinguished by a joint expedition of Russians and Byzantines (1016). The last of the khakans, George, Tzula, was taken prisoner. A remnant of the nation took refuge in an island of the Caspian (Siachouyé); others retired to the Caucasus; part emigrated to the district of Kasakhi in Georgia, and appear for the last time joining with Georgia in her successful effort to throw off the yoke of the Seljuk Turks (1089). But the name is thought to survive in Kadzaria, the Georgian title for Mingrelia, and in Kadzaro, the Turkish word for the Lazis. Till the 13th century the Crimea was known to European travellers as Gazaria; the "ram-parts of the Khazars" are still distinguished in the Ukraine; and the record of their dominion survives in the names of Kazarek, Kazaritshi, Kazarinovod, Kozar-owka, Kozari, and perhaps in Kazan.
